Taxpayers Association Official Blasts Away at Daily Standard

By DAN WHITTLE

BENTON -- A. W. Phegley, Chaffee, an officer of the Scott County Taxpayers Association, scattered stinging statements last night for nearly an hour in the court house. Sixteen attended the association meeting.

Phegley launched his attack by saying a story in The Sikeston Daily Standard newspaper Tuesday "pretty well whitewashes" the Scott county court and he said the Standard, along with the Scott County Democrat, in Benton, "does much of the county court's (commercial) printing."

He also charged the Standard with having stories that carried wrong information "all the way through" since the association was organized a month ago.

In an interview following the meeting, Phegley claimed he knew of three instances where wrong information was reported. The first instance he cited appeared in a news story last Friday when he claimed Judge J. E. Childress, Sikeston, runs the county court and the two other judges. Phegley then admitted making the statement, but added things were omitted from what he said before and after he charged Childresss with running the county court. Phegley then said he could not remember the two other "misquotes."

A. W. PHEGLEY, Chaffee, standing, blasts the Sikeston Daily Standard at a Scott County Taxpayers Association meeting in Benton last night. He holds a copy of the paper in his hands. Seated is Louis Heiserer, Illmo, chairman of the Association.

He said the newspaper has carried stories that generally make the organization appear in opposition to any form of taxation. The group was formed after the county's property assessments were increased by $7 million, of which $5 million was on farm land.

The story that he charged was a "whitewash" appeared after an interview with Hunter Phillips, chairman of the State Tax Commission, who said the Scott county court went about raising assessments in the proper manner. The commission ordered the court to raise the assessments after it was found that city property was assessed at about 22 per cent and farm property about 18 per cent. The legal ratio is a 30 per cent assessment.

The county court claims to have raised only those properties that were below 30 per cent rather than order an a blanket increase, which it contends would compound existing inequities.

The county court contends the tax books are more uniform and fair than ever before as a result of selective increases.

When the taxpayers group was first organized, primary purpose was to get the county court to rescind the increase order or order a blanket increase. The court has refused to do either.

Phegley said last night the increase was unfair and unequal. Phegley expressed a desire to debate Phillips. He said Phillips, Gov. Warren Hearnes and a group of attornies at Charleston need to be checked regarding relationships. Speaking specifically about attornies, Phegley mentioned "the ones that issued an opinion last week." That was done by the Joslyn and Joslyn law firm in Charleston after a request was made for an opinion regarding the assessment increases.

In the firm's printed opinion, it was stated the group could not be represented collectively in protests of the assessment increase. Attorney L. D. Joslyn said each case varies and would have to be appealed individually.

About 40 farmers appealed to the Scott County board of appeals Monday regarding the increase.

After complaints about the news media and others, Phegley had a confrontation with fellow association member Dewey Dicus, Benton, regarding a $10.30 bill for pamphlets that were not used by the organization.

Dicus apparently had hand bills printed advertising a protest march on the courthouse. Association Chairman Louis Heiserer, Illmo, told Dicus it was implied the association was behind the protest march. The association he said, connected with the incident, which occurred Aug. 4 when about 60 northern county farmers gathered at the court house to protest the increase to the county court.

Chairman Heiserer had to bang on the table to restore order.

During the argument, Phegley told members of the press not to print or record any of the statement already made. Phegley walked over to this newsman and said "If you print any of this, I will call Charley (Blanton) and tell him you did it after we told you not too."

Phegley said members of the press could either disregard the incident or leave the room, which was the circuit court room. No member of the press left the room.

Prior to this, Phegley complained that a rumor is being circulated in the court house indicating he backed down Monday from the county court or one of its members.

Phegley claims that anyone who says he was "pushed into a corner" is a "damned liar."

He said he had had conferred with Sheriff John Dennis about the matter and said Dennis told him he didn't personally believe it, Phegley said the sheriff told him "You (Phegley) don't push. I've known you too long."

Phegley said the board of appeals, which is made up of members of the county court and county Assessor Andy Halter, adjusted his increase by $1,200 but he doesn't want the adjustment because it might hurt his case when he goes to the state to make an appeal.

Phegley said members of the county court don't think "any votes come from out in the county." He took issue with this and said "we'll show Sikeston" something.

Phegley, who is also a member of the group's by-laws committee, said the committee felt it best the group should incorporate and become a non-profit organization.

Regarding other by-laws, which are yet to be drawn up, Phegley told of committees to get the county assessor office out of politics, to investigate political candidates and for fund raising.

Phegley outlined plans that call for quarterly meetings by the organization.

Last week the organization decided to seek an opinion from State Attorney General John Danforth regarding whether members of the county court can rise property assessments and then set on the board of appeals. Phegley said a meeting will be called regarding this.

Council to Set Election Date

The city council will convene at 9 a.m. Saturday to set an election date for residents to decide on a cable television franchise and the annexation of about 600 acres of land into the city limits. The land is located to the southeast of Sikeston.

The CATV franchise would be granted See-Mor, a Kansas based firm.

The land, if annexed, would be used for new industrial sites.

Civil Strife Spreads in Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops moved by air and land to Belfast today as 15,000 Roman Catholics barricaded themselves behind burning trucks and toppled lampposts and prepared for battle.

Six hundred British troops were due to arrive at Aldergrover airport near Belfast in early evening. Hundreds more moved to the city by land.

London said the troops were entering Belfast "as friends of all the people in that city in order to ensure that, if humanly possible, there will be no further loss of life."

Northern Ireland's six provinces, known as Ulster, are still part of Britain, though they have some autonomy in domestic affairs.

The troops came after a night of vicious fighting in which 5 persons were killed and 192 were wounded.

Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark appealed to Roman Catholics and Protestants alike in a television broadcast.

"For heaven's sake stay off the streets tonight," he said. "Stay in your homes and do not do anything that will exacerbate the situation."

He blamed the outlawed Irish Republican Army for Thursday night's violence.

At the same time the Irish Republic announced it was calling up first-line reserves of its 13,000-man armed forces, and a spokesman in Dublin said the action was taken to have the troops "in readiness for a peace-keeping operation." He did not explain further.

The Roman Catholic south already has several hundred troops along Northern Ireland's western border to support and supply field hospitals set up to receive wounded fleeing from Northern Ireland.

In Dublin itself, a crowd of several hundred people screamed as the Union Jack was ripped from the first-floor flagpole of the British Embassy. About 70 Dublin police guarding the embassy watched impassively as the crowd pounced on the flag and ripped it apart in a tug-of-war.

Barry Murphy, the 23-year-old docker who climbed from balcony to balcony to reach the flag, said he and others were going north "to help the fight for civil rights."

An embassy window was broken and another cracked by stonethrowers.

Fighting between the police and Protestants on one side and Roman Catholics on the other ebbed as morning came. But hatred seethed between the Catholic minority and the Protestant majority, and Ulster's worst outbreak of violence in nearly 50 years appeared far from over.

The Royal Air Force flew 600 British infantrymen from England to fill the gaps left by British troops called to action in Londonderry for the first time since World War I. Londonderry was calm but uneasy.

Another 600 men of the Royal Green Jackets were being recalled from leave and put on standby "because of the seriousness of the situation" in Ulster, the British Defense Ministry announced.

There were fears that the night of violence, in which at least 42 persons were treated for gunshot wounds, may add new fuel to the rioting throughout Ulster cities.

New Clash Blamed on Soviets

HONG KONG (AP) — The Soviets probably started the latest border clash by invading Chinese territory, Western analysts of Chinese military affairs said today.

All evidence here so far strongly indicates that the Chinese troops involved in the fighting were local security and local militia troops who were surprised by the Russian attack, analysts said.

They listed these factors and this reasoning:

—Accounts from Moscow of the fighting have emphasized that Soviet troops cut off Chinese border guards from "reinforcements."

It is likely that the cut-off "reinforcements" were troops of the professional People's Liberation Army who were camped some distance behind the border and who were attempting to reach the border as soon as fighting began.

—Moscow's announcement of the first fighting on Wednesday gave few details of Soviet casualties.

Soviet reports of Chinese-provoked battles have always given extensive accounts of Russians killed and wounded, with lengthy stories about the heroism of individual soldiers. But the Soviet press has given only scanty details of battles provoked by the Russian side.

This time, however, it has been Radio Peking that has given most of the details of the fighting, casualties and types of armored equipment and aircraft used by the Russians.

—Sinkiang is a "very poor province for China in security terms and the Chinese would be extremely unlikely to provoke anything there."

Chinese border policy in Sinkiang has been cautious because Chinese control of the area is relatively weak. Local minorities in he past have rebelled against Peking's authority and crossed the border into the Soviet Union, where many have relatives and friends. Soviet radio propaganda has encouraged these defections.

Collins Bound Over on Coed Slaying Charge

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A handsome young college student has been ordered to trial on a first-degree murder charge in the strangulation death of a pretty Eastern Michigan University freshman.

The victim, 18-year-old Karen Sue Beineman, was the latest of seven young women killed in a series of sex slayings in the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti area in the past two years.

The defendant, John Norman Collins, 22, is accused of murdering Miss Beineman last month and dumping her nude and battered body alongside a secluded road on the outskirts of Ann Arbor.

No charges have been filed in connection with the other six slayings.

Deake set Sept. 5 for Collins' arraignment on the charge in Washtenaw County Circuit Court.

Cotton Producers Hear Senators, Congressman

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, the state's junior senator, helped honor the state's senior senator today.

Sen. Stuart Symington, also a Democrat, was presented a plaque by the Missouri Cotton Producers Association.

Congressman Bill W. Burlison also participated. He presented the plaque. It was the first time that the three members of congress had appeared on a platform here together.

A meeting of the board of directors and township leaders of the Missouri Cotton Producers convened at the Ramada Inn at 10 a.m. There was a coffee for the wives.

Directors, leaders, their wives and guests, numbering more than 125 heard addresses by Senators Stuart W. Symington, and Thomas F. Eagleton.

Symington was introduced by Eagleton.

Burlison presented Symington with a 12 by 15 inch bronze plaque from the producers which read:

"To the Honorable Stuart W. Symington, in recognition of and appreciation for outstanding service to cotton and Southeast Missouri agriculture."

"I have become increasingly concerned about the problems of this the most important industry in our State: the production, processing and distribution of food and fiber," Symington said.

"It is trite, but it is true, that without a healthy farm economy, we cannot have real national security.

"For cotton, soybean and grain producers, the cost-price squeeze has intensified rather than eased over the past year.

"As recently as 1966, there was growing concern about the ability to satisfy world food needs. We were concerned about the capacity of American farmers to provide ample foods and fibers to satisfy domestic and foreign markets. But today, only 3 years later, we have idled almost 60 million acres of productive cropland and are currently producing sufficient wheat and soybeans which will add significantly to existing stocks.

"It should be stressed that, despite these millions of unused acres, we will be producing enough cotton and feed grains to fully supply domestic and foreign markets.

"You all are well acquainted with the developments that brought about this major change; but because of their continuing influence, I would like to review them briefly.

"The adoption of improved varieties of food grains, combined with better weather and increased use of fertilizers and insecticides in less developed countries such as India, Pakistan and the Phillipines have increased substantially the production of food grains in those countries; that development in turn decreasing the need for Public Law 480 shipments of wheat, rice and grain sorghums.

"Increased production of both cotton and man-made fibers abroad has decreased the demand for United States cotton exports; and increased use of man-made fibers at home has caused a reduction in the utilization of cotton. This has occurred to the extent that less than 8.5 million bales were used by domestic mills in the year ending July 31.

"Although livestock production has been expanding at a rapid rate, both at home and abroad, urea is being substituted for high protein cottonseed and soybean meals at an increasing rate in cattle feeding.

"This development, together with increased United States production of soybeans, and increased production of sunflower seed, especially in the Soviet Union, will result this year in the largest carryover of soybeans on record; and current prospects are for an even larger carryover in 1970.

"Increased technical and financial capabilities of large scale manufacturing firms assure a continued expansion of synthetic products that can only compete for agriculture's markets. A recent study in the United States Department of Agriculture concluded that synthetics and substitutes have taken 10 percent of the fats and oils market for soaps, 15 percent of the market for glycerine, 12 percent of the leather market for shoe uppers, 6 percent of the oilseed meal market, 9 percent of the citrus market; and although smaller percentages of the markets for wool, sugar, starch and fluid milk, these substitutes have taken 19 percent of the cotton market.

"With an excess capacity problem in agriculture and widespread hunger and malnutrition among our poor, it is not surprising that many people believe the farm problem could be solved by increasing the spending power of those with the lowest incomes. Those of us who helped expand the Food Stamp program in recent years believe we must continue to expand and improve our food stamp, school be solved by increasing the spending power of those with the lowest incomes. Those of us who helped expand the Food Stamp program in recent years believe we must continue to expand and improve our food stamp, school feeding and nutrition education programs, until they are available to all the hungry in our land

"It is noteworthy, however, to realize that even if the underprivileged were given an additional $3.5 billion for food expenditures, equivalent to all farm program payments in recent years, food consumption would be increased only 2 percent; and actually, consumption of food grains would probably decline, because low-income people usually reduce their cereal consumption, and increase their use of livestock products as their purchasing power goes up.

"Farmers of the United States have the capacity to produce 10 to 12 percent more farm products than can be marketed at the present time but only a small part of this excess capacity can be utilized profitably by means of expanded food stamp and school feeding programs.

"Analysts in the Economic Research Service conclude food expenditures would have to increase about $25 billion to expand demand for farm products sufficiently to replace, through the market, the $3.5 billion farmers now receive in direct payments.

"In view of this continuing problem of excess capacity in agriculture, it is encouraging to note that 17 farm and commodity organizations have joined together in recommending an extension of the basic features of the Agricultural Act of 1965. The more unity which can be developed among the people of agriculture, the greater our chance for sound legislation.

"I share the concern of a great American, Senator Allen Ellender, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, that the new Administration may attempt to substitute a massive long-range cropland retirement program for the annual commodity adjustment programs.

"Iowa State University and others have made studies which indicate lower annual costs could be attained with moderate long-term and retirement programs. Senator Ellender, who has done so very much for American farmers over the years, has wisely asked Secretary Hardin to evaluate these and other similar studies for his Committee.

"Secretary Hardin concluded that the actual cost of long-term cropland retirement would be far higher than the studies reported and that the production of the major crops--wheat, feed grains, soybeans and cotton--would be greater than in recent years even though 70 million acres were retired. Gross and net farm incomes would fall below the levels of recent years unless more than 70 million acres were retired.

"Just as farmers are caught in a cost price squeeze, and

County Wants to Buy Landfills

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP)—The Jefferson County Court said Thursday it plans to submit a bond issue proposal to voters to buy and operate three landfills in a move to stop St. Louis County from using them.

The court issued a statement saying St. Louis County officials found it "politically expedient not to locate additional landfills in their own county." The court said since it can't stop St. Louis County from using privately owned landfills, it will submit the bond issue proposal to voters in August. The county would then be able to forbid haulers from other areas from using the landfills.

Presiding Judge Walter N. Steinburk said no estimate has been made yet of the cost. He said it would be considerable. He said the bond issue proposal would have to cover purchase of the land and equipment and labor to operate the landfills.

Blaiberg Heart Malfunctioning

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The transplanted heart of Philip Blaiberg, who was readmitted to Groote Schuur Hospital Thursday when his condition deteriorated, is working at only a third of its proper pressure, sources close to the hospital said today.

Doctors also have found that the kidneys of the world's longest heart transplant survivor are not functioning properly, these informants said.

Blaiberg, 60, has had his new heart for 591 days.

Tests seeking the cause of his relapse were understood to be continuing, but hospital authorities said there will be no bulletin on him today. A bulletin Thursday said only that he had been readmitted "for investigation following a deterioration in his condition."

Tree Limb Causes Fatal Injury

PERRYVILLE, Mo. (AP) — The Highway Patrol reported today that a Catholic brother died of injuries he suffered Wednesday when knocked off a hay truck by a tree limb.

The victim, Leo Feltz, 56, died at DePaul Hospital in St. Louis several hours after he was injured.

He was assigned to St. Mary's Seminary in Perryville. The accident occurred on a gravel road about two miles west of Perryville.

Nixon to Name Supreme Court Choice Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a controversy growing over the man widely mentioned as his choice, President Nixon is planning to disclose on Monday his nominee to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court.

"To my knowledge, he has a candidate firmly in mind," Ronald L. Ziegler, Nixon's press secretary, said Thursday at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif.

But the White House has refused comment on reports that Nixon wants U.S. Circuit Court Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., of Greenville, S.C., to take the seat that Justice Abe Fortas resigned in mid-May.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, at a news conference in New York Thursday, urged Nixon not to nominate Haynsworth.

Lindsay said the judge "lacks the philosophy and sensitivity required to carry on the traditions of Louis Brandeis, Felix Frankfurter, Benjamin Cardozo and Arthur Goldberg."

However, Lindsay said, three New York judges reported to be among those considered by the President "stand in this tradition." He listed them as Stanley H. Fuld and Charles D. Breitel, both of the state Court of Appeals, and Hny H. Fuld and Charles D. Breitel, both of the state Court of Appeals, and Henry J. Friendly, a federal appeals judge.

Senator Besieged With Questions

BY E. J. MAYS
STATE EDITOR

MALDEN--"I am here today to find out the needs of MAMOS for a successful operation of its program as one of Pemiscot, New Madrid, Butler, and Dunklin counties' projects to aid the unemployed," U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton told 85 representatives of MAMOS today.

He pointed out he was a member of a Senate committee investigating such projects.

Conducting an hour and half program, the senator appraised MAMOS -- Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Service Incorporated -- for its fine work and stressed, "while I make no ironbound promise, I will do everything in my power to aid your causes, including welfare, job security and much-needed additional education facilities."

He was beseiged with questions, including:

"How to do away with sex and race discrimination when applying for a job, how a welfare person can go into a hospital without paying a $50 entry fee, why big manufacturing firms cannot handle their own job hiring and why additional time cannot be given the 23-week MAMOS training program."

Most of the criticism was leveled at brevity of training programs where farm persons are expected to learn skills in 23 weeks. MAMOS can enroll only farm background personnel.

One Negro woman brought applause when she told the Senator:

"We are being discriminated against because we are poor, not just because we are black. We don't want handouts. Just open the door to job opportunity, and we'll reach in and get what we want and need," she said.

Eagleton advised her that, "under President Nixon's request this week that welfare patrons be allowed to make an annual sum of $1,600, there should be an added incentive to work. Now you can go out and work - at a minimum $2,250 in Missouri -- when this is approved," he said.

Arrest in Home Theft

GIDEON -- Benny Baker, 23, route 1, Malden, has been arrested in connection with the burglary at 1 a.m. Thursday, of the Keith Summers' home near Gideon.

Items valued at $1,000 including eight shotguns and rifles, two cameras, a 20-inch electric fan, ammunition for the guns, and a suitcase, were recovered at the suspect's home, officers reported.

Two other guns reported missing have not been recovered.

Entry was gained through an unlocked back door.

Extra Charge on Trucks Tabled

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A proposed extra charge for trucks delivering furniture and other goods to private homes was suspended for 120 days by the Public Service Commission today pending an investigation.

The proposed additional charge would range from about 60 cents to as much as $15. If the PSC had not acted, the new rates would have gone into effect Aug. 16.

The extra charge was proposed by the Middle West Motor Freight Bureau and would have affected all carriers in the state.

ON CAPITOL PUNISHMENT

The debate on capital punishment goes on year after year. There are strong arguments for its being retained and equally strong advocacy of its abolition. There are peripheral arguments as to which crimes should be included under the supreme penalty and which not. There are religious arguments, moral arguments and legal arguments. Few people are neutral and each side is certain that they hold the truly just view.

Thirteen states have abolished capital punishment. This includes New York, which still imposes the death penalty for the murder of a peace officer if he is acting in the line of duty, or upon a prison inmate for killing a guard or fellow inmate, providing the murderer is already serving a life sentence.

The number of executions per year even in states with a provision for capital punishment has declined steadily over the years and there are indications that the death penalty will disappear in the U. S. within the next decade.

One argument against the penalty is that it does not act as a deterrent to crime. This is speciousit seems to us. The sentence of death is not capital deterrent. It is capital punishment. It is a deterrent only in so far as the individual murderer is concerned.

Another argument against the death penalty is the haphazard manner in which it is imposed. Shrewd lawyers are capable of working around it, and clients able to pay the fees frequently beat the penalty. Those unable to pay must suffer the penalty. This should be corrected, of course.

We recognize and agree with the concern for the rights of the accused. Capital punishment is final and ineradicable once exacted. But what of the victims? Their suffering is often overlooked, particularly by those whose sympathies lie with the guilty. We advocate a sentence of life imprisonment where there is sufficient doubt, but we are equally in favor of the death penalth for those cases where doubt is not at issue.

IS THIS RECESS NECESSARY?

Early in the 1969 session, Congress set itself a series of holidays, the longest to begin Wednesday, Aug. 13 and extend through Sept. 3, or the comfortable Wednesday after Labor Day. Now, anyone will tell you that this is the precise time to be away from Washington. But the Washington Daily News (July 28) states another point of view: "This is a vacation Congress hasn't earned, doesn't need, and can't afford."

The paper points out that Congress hasn't delivered a single appropriation bill, though the budgetary year ended July 1. The lawgivers have been similarly leisurely on the income surtax and other levies which expired July 1. All manner of other measures -- reform of the electroal system, for example -- remain either in committee or in dreamland.

Recesses of Congress are nothing new. I fact they have achieved centennial precedence. Congress recessed from March 30 to July 1 and from July 20 to Nov. 21 to 1867. The second session of the same Congress, which could be labeled the lazy Fortieth, recessed from July 27, 1868, to Sept. 21, and from Oct. 6 to Nov. 10.

After that the idea of recess, despite Washington heat and humidity, seems to have lain dormant until the 78th Congress decided to have holidays. They ran from July 8 to Sept. 14 in 1943, and from June 23 to Aug. 1 the following year. Subsequently, one branch or both of Congress have taken breathers. This one, the 91st, already has had two shots at rest and recreation.

REFORMING WELFARE

President Nixon's long-awaited welfare reform message, originally scheduled for mid-June, will be telecast to the nation on the evening of Friday Aug. 8. The delay in large measure has been due to nation-wide concern about inflation -- concern that would tend to make a request for greatly increased welfare spending politically unwise. According to Daniel P. Moynihan, Presidential Assistant for Urban Affairs, Nixon "will propose a total change in the welfare system."

However, it is almost certain that the Nixon will fall far short of the guaranteed national income advocated by many experts and even the family allowance scheme favored by Moynihan. The most radical of the plans the President is known to be considering is the Finch-Moynihan. The most radical of the plans the President is known to be considering is the Finch-Moynihan proposal. This calls for a system of national standards to narrow the gap between state welfare payments and a system for supplementing the income of employed heads of families whose incomes fall below the poverty line. The latter plan, federally financed and administered, would eliminate the controversial A.F.D.C. (Aid to Families with Dependent Children). It is estimated that the plan could increase the present welfare budget by $2 to $3 billion.

The Finch-Moynihan proposal would do away with many of the present widespread criticisms that welfare is paternalistic, that it is conducive to broken homes (in many states, no money is given to families as long as the father remains in the home), that it is uneven from state to state, and that it is burdensome to local government. If not revolutionary, the plan is certainly forward-looking. A Gallup Poll of June 1968, in which a majority of Americans sampled opposed a guaranteed income but favored guaranteed employment, indicates that the country is not yet ready for totally new solutions to old problems.

CHALLENGE TO MR. NEWHOUSE

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, acting in behalf of the Denver Post, plans to file suit in August against Samuel I. Newhouse, publisher of one of the country's largest newspaper chains. The objective of the suit is to force Newhouse to dispose of his 18.8 per cent interest in the Post, which he has been trying to acquire control of for several years.

Whatever the outcome, the case is bound to have wide repercussions in the communications industry. Goldberg says "It will be the first time that we shall be really challenging the newspaper and television monopolies that have been building up over the last decade." The Newhouse chain includes not only 22 newspapers but also seven television stations, four FM and three AM radio stations, 20 nationally distributed magazines, the Newhouse News Service, newsprint and rotogravure printing plants, and nine cable television systems. The entire operation is said to be worth between $200 million and $300 million.

Other media chains - - companies involved in both printed and broadcast media-- include Time Inc., Cowles Communications Inc., the Gannett Co., the Hearst Corp., the Washington Post Co., and Scripps - Howard. There are, in addition, numerous small communications combinations on a local level. According to the Federal Communications Commission, there were 73 communities as of late 1967 in which one person or company owned or controlled all of the local newspaper and broadcast outlets

The Justice Department and the F.C.C. both are taking a close look at the issue of concentration of media ownership. In a memorandum of Aug. 1, 1968, the Justice Department stated that "The clear effect of combined ownership of similar broadcast media in the same local market is to reduce the diversity of news and information sources available, and to lessen the degree of competition for advertising between these alternative media." And on Feb. 9, 1969, the F.C.C. said it would conduct a "broad-ranging inquiry to encompass the possible social, economic and political consequences in the broadcast field of the conglomerate trend and of the licensing of broadcasting stations to any other person or entity with other large- scale business interests."

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are a very imaginative people.

During frontier days the pioneers used to take the edge of dullness off their lives by telling each other tall tales of the feats they had done and the wild critters they had conquered.

These yarn-spinning sessions were mostly flights of the imagination, in which each participant tried to outdo the preceding one. From these confabs probably emerged the saying, "The biggest liar is the last one."

In the business world of today, white collar workers still indulge in wild flights of the imagination. But instead of lying about what they did, they lie about what they didn't do—and what they didn't do is get to work on time.

A friend of mine in the personnel department of a large firm for years has made a hobby of collecting excuses given by employes for tardiness or absenteeism. They range from the commonplace to the wierdly fanciful.

"The most common of all," said my friend, "is—'My alarm clock didn't go off.' When a man or woman gives a lame excuse such as this, I know he isn't going to go very far in our organization.

"There certainly is no room in our executive ranks for people with such humdrum minds. On the other hand, if a man says he was late because his cat was having kittens, I consider he may have real creative talent and put him down for possible promotion."

Here are a few selections from his collection of excuses, followed by his own evaluations.

"I g

"My wife forget to wake me up at the regular time." This tendency to blame others probably shows up in his work. Ease him out at the first chance.

"What makes you think I was late? Can you prove it? Anyway, what ratfink in the office turned me in?" His aggressive traits might prove useful at a straw boss level, but I'm afraid he'll probably just turn out to be the next chairman of the union grievance committee.

"I had a hangover." Well, every office ought to be able to afford one honest man.

"Frankly, I took yesterday off because I'm so bored with my job I felt that if I showed up I'd probably commit hari-kari on your rug." Give him a better job, and six months to make good at it.

"I'm late because this pretty girl on the bus fainted, and I got so busy giving her mouth-tomouth resuscitation that I forgot all about what time it was." Better be nice to this liar. I'll probably be working for him in another 10 years.

"Here I am a half hour late—all because some jerk put his car in my parking space." Oh, oh, I hope he doesn't find out it's my car. I didn't think the boss was coming in today.

The grade-school principal dropped into the new Third-Grade teacher's room to see how she was adjusting to her first day of school.

"He can't be THAT smart," said the principal. "Ask him something."

The teacher called the boy forward and inquired, "What does a dog do on three legs that a man does on two legs that I do sitting down?"

"Shakes hands," said the boy.

"What has a cow got four of that I have only two of?" she went on.

"Legs," the boy replied.

"What is a four-letter word meaning intercourse?" she continued.

"Talk" he answered.

The teacher turned to the principal. "Well, what should I do?"

He drew her aside and whispered, "Better promote him to Fourth Grade. I missed all three questions!"

BLACK PANTHERS DISAPPOINTED IN COMMUNIST DEN

Raymond Johnson is a "Lieutenant" in the militant "Black Panthers". Last November, he so desperately desired to leave the United States that he hijacked a National Airlines jet to fly to his intended utopia, communist Cuba.

Now, after having spent eight months in the "paradise" of Fidel Castro, Raymond Johnson has nothing but complaints, - "The Panthers have not been received in a revolutionary fashion. We have been condemned to live in Cuba," he said.

Johnson complained that members of the "Black Panthers" have been imprisoned, isolated, banned from Havana, and told that in Cuba they would not be allowed to organize their party.

"We think there's racial discrimination in Cuba," he added, in noting that the Panthers were prevented from talking to black Cubans.

Eldridge Cleaver, who has the title of Information Minister of the "Black Panthers", was under indictment on a charge of attempted murder in California, when he jumped bail, and escaped to Cuba. He had denounced the United States vigorously, but it seems that he too has now become disillusioned by his stay in Castroland.

Cleaver recently turned up in Algeria, where he held a televised press conference. He expressed the desire to return to the United States, if he could make a deal to remain free on bond rather than be imprisoned.

Clearly, one of the things the "Panthers" miss about the United States is how relatively free they were to carry on their propaganda, and even subversion. Castro proved to be considerably tougher. There should be some kind of lesson in this for other revolutionaries who want to overthrow our Republic form of government.

Inside Labor

Blacks and Ballot Box:

It's tough to be black and moderately militant. Or moderate . . . It's like being stood up against a cellophane wall so both sides can snipe at you at the same time

It's been rough going for Negro leader Bayard Rustin. He's tough : he knows what he wants. A. he knows that violence will beget only bloody streets and tragically dead youth. So while he urges swift emergence of the black communities into the nation's mainstream, he urges his brethren to use the ballot box not the explosive powder box. For this he is called on "Uncle Tom" by the extremists.

They deride him, too, because he does not fault American labor as a mastadon grinding down all others. But despite criticism, Bayard Rustin has kept the faith, the peace and appears to be winning the fight for reason.

I asked him how it feels to be the man in the middle and to spell out his philosophy. Here is his reply, written exclusively for this column:

By Bayard Rustin

New York--In the long history of the black man in America, no decade has been filled with more significant events than the one which will terminate at the close of this year. In the 1960s we have witnessed great social and political triumphs, and also saddening defeats. We have seen men of great stature emerge and suddenly disappear. There has been an unprecedented rise in the hopes and aspirations of black people, and we have seen the frustrations of these hopes lead to despair, violence, and withdrawal. We would have to go back a century to the time of the Civil War and Emancipation, to find a decade that approaches in significance the one we are now living through.

The sweep and complexity of events demand that we resist the temptation of an emotional and simplistic response and instead try to analyze the present situation with the utmost precision. What is demanded of blacks, therefore, is not undirected rage, however compelling this emotion may be, but a clear definition of political and economic objectives, as well as a strategy for achieving them. In the absence of such a program for social struggle, rage can only feed upon itself and lead to comforting but self-defeating forms of withdrawal, or to violeence which would be destructive to all concerned. It will also induce in the white community the uncreative emotions of fear or guilt. This emotional dynamic of rage, fear and guilt is occurring with unusual force today, and its social consequences can only be reactionary. The prevalence of confusing emotions has led many people to identify white racism as the most pressing and immediate problem that must be solved. I reject this analysis, not because I think that white Americans are innocent of racism -- many, I'm sure, are the guilty of prejudice, as are some people of all races -- but because it cannot lead to a constructive programmatic solution to the plight of black Americans. In the firstst place, if we locate the source of the problem in the attitudes of white people, it follows that the solution must be mass psychoanalysis, something I find neither practical nor appealing.

More importantly, white breast-beating will hardly help the black youth who is unemployed or the black child who is being miseducated. But what it will do will be to compel the guilty individuals, by a soothing process of rationalization and self-delusion, to justify their position. Thus, unintentionally, and perhaps even unconsciously, they may eventually give their tacit approval to the growing white reaction against the movement for equality.

We have, therefore, to focus our attention on the social and economic conditions which have produced poverty, segregation, deteriorated housing, inferior schools, and poor health. If we can alter these fundamentals difficulties, I do not think it unlikely that we shall also see a marked reduction in rage, fear, and racism, as the emotions and attitudes of individuals adjust to new and more equitable social conditions.

Our task, then, must be to develop a political strategy and an economic program which attack injustice at its source. I am not concerned here with programs that might elect a local official or employ a few individuals, but with building a movement that can alter the fundamental social and economic relations in the society. What is essential, therefore, is to identify those iinstitutions which can provide black people with the maximum power and leverage in their efforts to achieve equality. The institutions I am referring to are the Democratic Party and the trade union movement, and the instruments that black people must use to make them more viable and progressive are the ballot box and the union card.

The Democratic Party is essential to the black struggle because it is the only mass-based political institution in the society that has the potential to become a majority movement for progressive social reform. Today it is not a majority party, and there remain within it powerful reactionary elements, particularly the Southern Conservatives. But at the Chicago convention many of these conservatives were driven out by insurgent delegations from Mississippi and Georgia composed of Negroes and white moderates. The dominant forces within the party are now precisely these groups -- Negroes, liberals, and the labor movement -- who form the basis of a majority coalition of the democratic left, and who thus can move the Federal government to act upon the problems which so afflict our nation. It is toward such a coalition that we must build, and we can only do so through the active and effective use of the ballot box.

And the trade union movement is essential to the black struggle because it is the only institution in the society capable of economically uplifting the masses of impoverished and exploited Negroes. Its legislative program for job creation, urban reconstruction, education, health, and tax reform is designed specifically to help the lower and lower-middle classes in which blacks are so disproportionately represented. And by its efforts to organize the unorganized -- whether they be farm workers in California, sanitation workers in Memphis, or hospital workers in New York and Charleston -- it is enabling hundreds of thousands of poor Americans to escape the lumpenproletariat and to achieve a measure of dignity and economic security. It is the union card, therefore, together with the ballot box, that must become part of the basic dynamism of the black struggle.

There are many young blacks today who would deny that the electoral process and the labor movement can play an effective role in the black movement. But they have no comprehensive strategy with which to replace the one I have just outlined, and without such a strategy their protest, though militant in rhetoric and intention, may be reactionary in its effect. For in the present political period, protest is a value only to the degree that it can creatively and non-violently call attention to social injustice and enhance the use of the ballot box and the organization of the unorganized.

To the degree that protest becomes violent, it will strengthen the rightist forces in the country and make impossible the further development toward political and economic equality.

While the objectives I have proposed can be achieved non-violently, let me be clear that their realization would amount to a revolution in this society, by which I mean a fundamental reorientation of our social and economic priorities And indeed, the problems of our cities cannot be solved by anything less than a revolution. But even if we were to achieve these objectives, I must caution that there would still be protest, for the revolution we are presently undergoing involves also the demand demand for dignity and the democratic participation in the politic al pro cess. There must, therefore, be visible representation of minority people in those bodies where decisions are made. And more importantly, these bodies must become responsive to the needs and aspirations of their constituencies. Until this final objectiv is achieved, we cannot in all honesty claim to have built a democracy in this country.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Nixon bows to oil depletion reform; tells aides to forget campaign pledge; Oilmen stunned at beneficiaries' ingratitude.

WASHINGTON--In the matter of oil privileges, President Nixon has seen the handwriting on the voting-booth wall. Letters have been flooding into the White House and Congress from angry taxpayers denouncing the 27 ½ per cent oil depletion allowance. Result: The President has instructed his legislative aides to keep out of the depletion debate.

This will come as a rude awakening to the oil tycoons who contributed heavily to the GOP cause after getting Richard Nixon's assurance that the 27½ per cent oil write-off was sacrosanct with him.

He laid down the law to his own tax reformers that he wanted no change in the oil depletion allowance. The full 27½ per cent was necessary, he told them, to encourage investors to risk the high cost of drilling for oil. On this point, he said, his mind was made up.

He has now decided, however, not to esist the taxpayers' rebellion on Capitol Hill. In the back rooms of Congress, White House aides had argued against an oil depletion cut. Maryland Congressman Rogers C.B. Morton, the Cherubic GOP National Chairman, led the closed-door fight against the cut to 20 per cent. But the President, heeding the public mood, has now called off the opposition.

For the oil industry, the assaul on their cherished tax loophole has been a traumatic experience. The oil depletion statue had always been regarded as holy writ by the tax-writing house ways and means committee.

The late speaker Sam Rayburn had thoughtfully loaded the committee with oil loyalists. No one was admitted to this select circle who couldn't give Rayburn the right answer to one question: "Do you favor the oil depletion allowance?"

The oil industry ensured their loyalty by contributing heavily to their political campaigns. Both Democrats and Republicans are deeply indebted to the oil barons who spend an estimated $50 million a year to subsidize politicians and publicize the imaginary distress of the oil industry.

-Ungrateful Congressman-

Oilmen were stunned, therefore, over the 7½ per cent depletion cut by the faithful ways and means committee. When Chairman Wilbur Mills suggested a token reduction to appease the taxpayers, the Petroleum Institute's Frank Ikard hurried up to Capitol Hill to set Mills straight.

For two hours, Ikard lectured Mills on the inviolability of the 27 ½ per cent allowance. The oil lobbyist warned sternly that the tax exemption couldn't even be whittled down half of one per cent without injuring the industry.

Mills continued to believe that his oil friends' interests would best be served by offering the taxpayers a token reduction. He suggested a cut from 27½ to 23 per cent.

It was no less than Hale Boggs, the Congressman from the Oil State of Louisiana, who demanded a deeper cut to 20 per cent. He cast the decisive vote inside the committee in beating down, by a 13-12 margin, the lesser 4½ per cent cut.

On the subsequent house roll call over tax reforms, 26 of the 30 congressmen who voted against the bill came from the oil states of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Boggs was the only Louisiana who voted for the reform bill. Nor was this the first time that Hale Boggs has shown courage. Though a Southerner he also helped lead the fight on the house floor for civil rights.

Now the oil lobbyists are counting upon Senate finance chairman Russell Long, their champion in the Senate, to save the 27½ per cent oil depletion allowance. They have boasted, privately at least, of a deal to get the Senate to restore 2½ per cent of the house cut. The Lobbying effort is directed by Ikard and by Dan Jones, Washington Counsel for the Independent Petroleum Association.

Actually, the 7½ per cent cut would still leave the oil industry with more tax privileges than any other industry. Last year, for example, manufacturing corporations paid 40 per cent of their pretax earnings in federal taxes. Oil companies paid only 11 per cent, and this was an all-time high. It used to be only 4 per cent.

In 1967, Atlantic-Richfield paid no federal income tax at all on profits of nearly $139 million. Standard Oil of California paid only one per cent on earnings of a half billion dollars.

Liberals in Congress believe the oil depletion allowance should be slashed at least another 5 per cent. This would still leave the Oil Industry with other tax loopholes. Even bigger than its depletion tax break is an allowance to write off in one year the intangible costs that other industries must spread over several years.

It will be interesting to watch the outcome of this classic battle between the public interest and a powerful private interest.

--Space Notes--

President Nixon quietly vetoed suggestions that Russian Cosmonauts be invited to the Presidential dinner for American Astronauts. The President felt the invitation should be saved until the Cosmonauts could be given the full red-carpet treatment . . . Republican leaders have urged Astronaut Frank Borman, who commanded the first manned flight around the moon, to run for Congress. He can claim residence in at least three states. As yet he hasn't made up his mind . . .some space scientists are excited about the possibility of colonizing the planets. They claim it would be possible to generate an atmosphere on the moon from the Volcanic rocks and to make Mars habitable by using Nuclear energy to create an artificial atmosphere.

Boy Has Hair on Chest, Arms, And Legs---Face Is Baby-Smooth

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from "Hirsuite Hilda", the secretary who had to shave every day. It makes me sick that life is so unfair.

I am a 23-year-old boy and I have lots of hair on my chest and arms and legs, but my face is as smooth as a baby's backside. I shave twice a week, even though I don't need to. The doctor says there is nothing wrong with me -- that these things happen now and then, and nothing can be done about it.

When I go to a movie for adults only, I carry my I.D. card. I also wear a sport shirt and leave the collar open so the cashier can see the hair on my chest.

Is there anything I can do to get the hair on my face to grow? Thanks. -- Harry (Another embarrassment. This is my real name.)

Dear Harry: The doctor gave you the straight goods. Accept it. If it's any comfort to you, please know that millions of men consider shaving a nuisance and would like to trade your problem for theirs.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 17, married 15 months, and have a baby. My husband is 19. Bill has changed into a different person this past year. I can't believe it.

He is so jealous I feel like I'm in jail. If someone calls on the phone and it's a wrong number he says it was another guy. Last night he spent an hour looking for tire marks in the driveway. He worked late and was sure someone was here.

Tonight he went through my album and tore up all the pictures of my high school friends. I phoned Dad and asked him to come and get me and the baby. This marriage is lousy and I see no hope for the future. Please tell me where I can get a free lawyer. I want a divorce so I can start over. --- Messed Up Girl

Dear Girl: Start what over? Another mess? Here you are, 17 years of age, and already looking for a divorce. It won't solve your problem, Toots. It will only free you to make another lousy marriage.

You need time to grow up and so does that active volcano who calls himself a husband. Stay apart a few weeks and then get some counseling.

Dear Ann Landers: Several of us girls gave a lovely engagement shower for a co-worker. Ramona told us that her fiance's wife had agreed to a nice quiet divorce and the wedding would come off in the fall. The shower was held at my home and the gifts were beautiful.

Last week Ramona announced, with a good deal of embarassment, that the man's wife has a heart condition and he cannot leave her. The wedding is off. She didn't say one word about returning the gifts. Later I asked her what she intended to do with all those lovely presents. She replied, "I'll keep them. They will come in handy when I meet someone wonderful."

Is this fair? We are --- Burning on Michigan Avenue

Dear Mich: Beat out the flames and forget it. You dum[illegible] gave a shower for a girl and [illegible]urself on dates? W[illegible]hat's wrong? S[illegible]uldn't you? Former Reporter Now Nixon Staff Member

BALTIMORE (AP) - On a slow news day back in 1948, a city editor told a young reporter, "Go take a look at the waterfront and see what's going on."

Last Saturday, that reporter -- who apparently found out what was "going on" -- was named by President Nixon to the $40,000-a-year job as head of the federal Maritime Commission, subject to Senate approval.

Mrs. Helen Delich Bentley, veteran maritime editor of the Baltimore Sun, accepted the president's nod with the words, "I consider myself a real fighter on behalf of the American merchant marine.

"This industry is torn apart. I've tried very hard in the past to bring it together."

Should she be confirmed in the post, Mrs. Bentley would "pursue vigorously our goal of preserving and encouragaing a healthy economy of which the shipping industry is a vital segment."

A first - generation American of Yugoslavian descent, she was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1944 and joined the Sun after brief stints with the United Press in Fort Wayne, Ind., and on the Lewiston, Idaho, Trbiune.

Since then, she has been a prolific reporter, known to be tough yet fair.

Portageville Minister Announces Plans For New Church Building

PORTAGEVILLE -- The Rev. Jerry Haughton, of the Portageville Trinity Baptist Church announced today that plans are underway to construct a $40,000 sanctuary and education plant. The structure will be of an ultra-modern design and will be located on a 200 x 300 foot lot on the corner of McCrate Avenue and 11th Street.

Church services are presently being held in the Cotton Bowl Lanes building on Highway 61, where the members turned the former bowling alley into temporary classrooms and a church auditorium. The building is given rent free by the Daugherty brothers of Portageville.

Rev. Haughton came to Portageville in June of '68 as pastor of the First Baptist Church and remained in that position for six months. But due to fundamental differences in the methods of ministering, the church split, thus came about the constitution of the Trinity Baptist Church in January of '69 with 75 Charter members. In spite of the split, however, the Church is still affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention.

"When the split occurred," said Rev. Haughton "families were divided, but our people were determined." "Every service is an emphasis on intensive Bible study," he continued, "the old type of hell fire and brimstone sermons with the ghost story illustrations is the type preaching that is a thing of the past."

Rev. Haughton says that his ministry is different and consists of "equipping believers to be ministers in the world." For this reason emphasis is given to Bible training.

"Most ministers are community chaplains," says Rev. Haughton, "but I regard myself as being placed in charge by God to only those members of the Trinity Baptist Church."

Rev. Haughton does not perform weddings for Christians and non-Christians, but married only couples if both are professing Christians. He also does not perform Funerals for non-Christians. He says that his responsibility to the non-Christian consists in nothing more than preaching the Gospel to him.

The Church emphasizes the fundamental doctrines of the faith, but will use any methods which are honorable to reach mankind.

Book discussion groups are offered for the young people of the Church instead of Sunday School and in place of Training Union, a "College of Christianity," has been organized with different courses being offered each quarter. Contemporary novels are read and discussed among the young people of the church and they also attend movies in groups which are considered philosophical (2001 Space Odessy and Rose Mary's Baby) after which they gather at one's house for discussion.

On August 20, a Christian hippie, once converted under Rev. Haughton, will be in Portageville to preach and sing folk gospel music. The event will take place on the parking lot of the present Church location.

Rev. Haughton graduated from Mississippi College in Jackson, Mississippi in 1965 and also graduated from the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary in 1968 with a Master of Theology Degree. He majored in Biblical languages (Hebrew and Greek) and uses these in his services instead of any translations.

Rev. Haughton is releasing a book to Zondervan Publishers this month, which is titled "God's Strategy For The Church". The book should be on the market next summer.

Rev. Haughton, 26, his wife JoAnn and 2 month old Brian live in the Parsonage on DeLisle Street.

Mrs. Nixon Describes Residence

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Pat Nixon showed off the redecorated Spanish-style oceanfront Western White House and told how she tried to keep expenses down and make the place j"light and airy."

"I try not to be extravagant," the President's wife said Thursday as she took reporters on a tour of the $340,000, 14-room, five-bath Nixon home set amid cyprus, palm and eucalyptus trees.

She said she tried to make use of French provincial furniture the Nixons had in their New York apartment, painting things "to make them fresh and new."

From the six-hole golf course and blue-tiled, scallop-edged swimming pool to the President's red-and-white bedroom with a Vietnam painting over the bed, Mrs. Nixon said, "I love it."

With a minimum of time on the project—"We did it all in one day"—Mrs. Nixon put to work Los Angeles interior decorators Cannel and Chaffin to create a predominately yellowand-white color scheme with accents of royal blue.

The major improvement, Mrs. Nixon said, was making the place "light and airy" by painting the heavy wooden ceiling beams white, replacing venetian blinds with white shutters and cutting back shrubbery to enhance the Pacific ocean view.

The yellow living room looks out on yellow marigolds in the garden and has three high arched windows for a view of the sea.

Every room has a white telephone and Nixon's has red ones, too.

A closet in a downstairs hallway houses the Nixon' music system. Mrs. Nixon tried to put on a record to demonstrate, but confessed, "I haven't been here long enough to learn how to use the machine."

There have been reports that neighbors in the Cyprus Shores community are upset over the security restrictions the Nixons have imposed on them. But Mrs. Nixon said all the neighbors have written her nice notes inviting her to tea. And she plans to have them in for a visit.

The President's study is the only second-floor room in the sprawling white stucco, redtiled house. The house surrounds a courtyard with a fountain.

In their redecorating, the Nixons even fitted the Secret Service into the Spanish-styled decor. The agents occupy matching white stucco, red-tile roofed gazebos with tinted glass windows.

The Gospel Visitor

By: REEDUS M. BAUGHER

No one truly comes to know and appreciate the word of God, apart from personal study. (2 Tim. 2:15) Therefore, we as teachers and preachers of the gospel, must use a reasonable portion of our time to incite this study. Man is a rational being, and thus, is responsible to think and act. The gospel is a message which appeals to man's intelligence. It is not "better felt than told;" neither void of emotion. Rather it gives real meaning to our feelings, is the reason for our hopes, and the rock on which we stand. (1 Pet. 3:15; Luke 6:46-48) Paul said, "I know whom I have believed . . . " (2 Tim. 1:12) Our hope and destiny rest not on many, but on God through His word. (1 Cor. 4:6; 2 Cor. 3:4-5; 1 Thess. 2:13) Yet we are responsible beings, we must understand the will of the Lord, (Eph. 5:17) and respond in accord with that will. (Acts 2:40) We must think and act!!

For the past three weeks we have sought to give direction to the earnest.; through a study of actual accounts of the lost being saved, recorded by Luke in the book of acts. Unless you personally read and studied what transpired, you received very little from these lessons. We are not trying to deceive, we want our faith to rest upon God's world. Will you reason together with us?

In the book, commonly called, "The acts of the apostles." Is recorded nine case histories of conversions and two cases of non-conversions. In these we learn how and why people are saved and why they are not. This book is neither the acts of all the apostles nor all the acts of any of the apostles, but is primarily the work of Peter (Chapters 1-12) and Paul (Chapters 13-28) as they preached to the Jews and then the Gentiles. In this book is also, a history of the early church. We will list the conversions for your personal study.

1. Acts 2:22-41 -- Jews of every nation, -- Heard, believed, repented, baptized. 2. Acts 8:5-17 -- Samaritans -- Heard, believed, were baptized. 3. Acts 8:26-39 -- Man of Ethiopia -- Heard, believed, confessed, baptized. 4. Acts 22:3-16 -- Saul of Tarsus -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 5. Acts 10:33-48 -- Cornelius -- Heard, believed, repented, was baptized. 6. Acts 16:13-15 -- Lydia -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 7. Acts 16:25-34 -- Jailor of Philippi -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 8. Acts 18:8 -- The Corinthians -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 9. Acts 19:1-20 -- The Ephesians -- Heard, Believed, were baptized.

Miller was named the tournaments most outstanding player for the tournament. He was Risco's catcher.

Parma edged Lilbourn 4-3 as Darrell Ramsey homered and drove in three runs for third place honors.

New SHS Grid Coach Optimistic

Bill Priday will take over the position of head football coach at Sikeston High School, replacing William R. Sapp, and will meet the prospects for the 1969 squad today as the first practice session gets underwav.

Mr. Priday graduated from Fredricktown high school and went on to attend college at Cape Girardeau where he played football for four years at guard and line-backer positions.

Bill was elected co-captain of the college squad his senior year along with being selected as a member of the first team all-conference squad as a guard.

Bill began his teaching and coaching career at Festus where he stayed on for five years. He then moved to Fredricktown where he was head football coach for three years.

He was also head coach for the next three years at Festus. Teams he coached at Festus and Fredricktown were members of the Mineral Area Conference.

This conference usually had about nine members squads and he led his team to second place two years.

Along with coaching football, Bill has also taught History, Social Studies, and Physical Education.

He has been a track coach prior to coming to Sikeston. His duties here are scheduled to be coaching football and instructing physical education classes.

Assisting Bill in coaching this season will be Norman Lambert, Muarry Sullivan, Jim Graham, George Hale, and Johnny Heacox.

The Bulldog gridmen held its first practice session today. According to Priday, the first two weeks of practice will be spend conditioning and drilling.

"I have not had a real chance to see the team as of yet, however, it will be a small team and I don't know about the speed", Priday commented about this year squad.

Priday went on to say that: "I coach with pretty basic methods, but will probably initiate a multiple offense and defense."

He also stated that he doesn't know much about the other teams in this area, but from what he has read, he expects Cape and Poplar Bluff to be respectable with several of last years players returning.

In concluding, Priday said: "I am looking forward to [illegible] football [illegible] very hap[illegible] the [illegible] and s[illegible]

O. J. Makes Debut

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Will O. J. Simpson be a $300,000 flop in his pro football debut with the Buffalo Bills against the Detroit Lions at Tiger Stadium tonight?

The debut of the most prized rookie since Joe Namath in the play-for-pay gridiron sport headlines a two-game schedule that kicks off another busy weekend of 12 exhibitions.

The Baltimore Colts play the Houston Oilers in the Astrodome in tonight's other game. Seven games are scheduled for Saturday night and three more Sunday afternoon.

O. J. vaunted All-American running back and the Heisman Trophy winner for Southern California, signed with the Bills only last weekend and hence may not play the entire game against the Lions.

The performance of the famed 6-foot-1, 207-pounder from San Francisco will be watched closely. There have been cases of college stars who did not make it with the pros, notably John Huarte, All-American quarterback from Notre Dame who also won the Heisman Trophy.

The Bills go against the Lions fresh from an upset 21-17 victory over the Washington Redskins last week, paced by the passing of Tom Flores and the running of Max Anderson. the Lions hope to rebound after a 38-13 drubbing from the Kansas City Chiefs.

Johnny Unitas, apparently recovered from his ailing throwing arm, will lead the Colts against the Oilers in the Astrodome. The veteran quarterback completed 12 of 19 passes for 147 yards and one TD in pacing the unbeaten Colts to a 34-30 victory over the Oakland Raiders last week.

The Oilers, who beat Buffalo 24-7 on Aug. 2, were idle last week and are ready with quarterback Pete Beathard reported "100 per cent improved" by Coach Wally Lemm.

The Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers renew their rivalry Saturday night at Milwaukee in a game that will be nationally televised by CBS.

Cleveland is at Los Angeles, New Orleans is at Denver, Philadelphia is at Miami, Oakland is at San Diego help round out the Saturday night schedule that also lists Pittsburgh vs. St. Louis at Norfolk, Va. and Cincinnati vs. Kansas City at Jackson, Miss.

The Big Game Sunday pits the world champion New York Jets and Superbowl hero Namath against the New York Giants at New Haven, Conn.

It is the first meeting between the New York City rivals and the AFL Jets are reported determined to down the NFL Giants for the so-called NYC championship.

Atlanta is at Boston and Dallas at San Francisco in Sunday's other games.

Hockersmith Stars As Eagles Take Over First

EAST PRAIRIE -- The Eagles took sole possession of first place in the Little League baseball standings after last night's 9-0 victory over the Dodgers, who were tied for the leadership.

It was the efforts of Spud Hockersmith that lifted the Eagles into first as he pitched a no-hitter, allowing only one base runner, that coming on an infield error in the sixth and blasting two home runs and a double.

In the opener, the Braves defeated the Mets 10-4 with Vernon Scott hurling a three hitter and Jim Hockersmith and Berry Morgan providing the hitting with two singles.

Robert Davidson was the loser. Brian Cox tripled for the Mets and the games only extra base hit.

Bids Asked on I-55 Fruitland To Perry County Segment

JEFFERSON CITY--Right of way has been obtained, plans are completed and on Aug. 29 the state highway commission will take bids for the remaining 13-1 miles of Interstate Highway 55 in Cape Girardeau county from its present Fruitland terminus to the Perry County line.

Announcement of the status of the route was made by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

In addition to this section of I-55, the State Highway Department also announced that the route of I-55 in Ste. Genevieve County has been divided into five segments and bids on these will be received in September and November.

At the Sikeston district 10 office of the highway department, Wm. R. Yarnell, engineer in the surveys and plans division, said if the bids are favorable for the Cape County segment of I-55, construction will begin in the current fiscal year.

He explained the contract will extend only to the south bank of Apple Creek on the north. The bridging of the creek will be a part of the next contract to be awarded, a segment 11.1 miles long in Perry County extending to a point west of Perryville.

There will be 14 bridge structures between Fruitland and Apple Creek, however. These have been designed by the department's bridge engineers in Jefferson City. Highway design, however, has been done by the engineers at the Sikeston office.

The announcement that right of way had been obtained and plans completed indicates the route has been expedited by the department to complete it as soon as possible. In May, 10 per cent of plans remained uncompleted and 13 per cent of right of way had not been obtained.

Construction is now underway on I-55 south of Portageville and a gap remains from there to a point south of Hayti. Construction is underway in the Festus area on the link reaching southward toward Fruitland. Contracts on 9.1 miles south from Festus were awarded in February.

Russell Sublette, engineer in the survey and plans division of the district highway office in Kirkwood, said the Ste. Genevieve portion of I-55 was divided into five sections to bring bidding into the range of smaller contractors.

Three of the five portions are south of State Route 0 in the county and it is expected bids wil be received for these in September. The remaining two sections north of Route O will be up for bids in November.

Condemnation proceedings are now underway for the three protions south of Route O. Commissioners have been appointed and are to review the land on Aug. 18. Condemnation proceedings have been filed on a tract north of Route O, the department reported, but commissioners have not yet been appointed.

The five sections in Ste. Genevieve County total 24.9 miles of construction. Each of the five is of approximately the same length.

Tax Reform, Yes, but Not At Expense of Churches

By DAVID POLING

An essential and vital discussion being held by the Senate Finance Committee is in the area of tax reform. Almost every special consideration that has been part of the tax regulations of our government is under scrutiny. The loopholes are not only being closed but sealed as well.

But a closer look at the reform proposals of the Long committee suggests a paralyzing crunch on a vast number of worth-while, even necessary, institutions of our national life.

A bill being considered would virtually abolish life income contracts and charitable remainder trusts for colleges, hospitals, churches and other nonprofit organizations. In simple language, it means that a person would no longer have a tax incentive and a tax advantage to give securities, property or real estate in return for a life income contract. The individual now enjoys the option of supporting the charity or church or college of his choice through the gift of property or securities that have appreciated over the years. The new provision would place a tax on the market value of a farm or home or stock. The donor would be socked with a whopping tax on the capital gain and the institution discovers that expected sources of income and donations have vanished.

While it is true that most of our charitable causes have attracted and cultivated a broad following, the largest chunk of money comes from a rather small minority. Take for an example, that church-related college in a neighboring community. You don't have to be a math major to realize that the tuition and fees charged each student are not enough to carry the costs of operating the school. I doubt if the income from these charges could equal even half the operating expenses. The rest of the money comes from alumni, friends, a few wealthy "angels" and perhaps $25,000 from a national mission board or agency. And when you look closely at these outside sources, you will find that they represent major capital gifts or donations for operating expenses that are the result of appreciated securities or real property.

This should be no surprise and ought to be praised as one of the brightest things ever established by the Congress. It encourages the flow of gifts to the private sector and strengthens our national life through the expansion of nongovernmental services. A tremendous amount of health, education and welfare pour out of our private, sectarian centers. To tamper or hinder or shut down these fountains of vitality and inspiration would be a sickening result of tax reform gone mad.

Yes, we must have tax reform. We must experience it now, in these days of inflation, new services and broader coverage. But the search for new income must not be pursued at the expense of those institutions that provide so much flavor and quality to our national life. And it doesn't take a math professor to tell you that this country has lots of tax money, lots of billions upon billions that have been squandered, slopped and sunk into a Vietnam catastrophe. That doesn't come under tax reform but it is the biggest loophole of all.

What We Think About It

By Lt. Colonel Norman E. May
of Warwick, Bermuda

"I think I know what is bothering the students. I think that what we are up against is a generation that is by no means sure that it has a future.

"I am growing old, and my future, so to speak, is already behind me. But there are those students of mine, who are in mind, always; and there are my children, the youngest of them now seven and nine, whose future is infinitely more precious to me than my own. So it isn't just their generation; it's mine, too. We're all in it together.

"Are we to have a chance to live? We don't ask for prosperity, or security. Only for a reasonable chance to live, to work out our destiny in peace and decency. Not to go down in history as the apocalyptic generation.

"And it isn't only nuclear war. Another overwhelming threat is in the population explosion. That has not yet even begun to come under control. There is every indication that the world population will double before the year 2000, and there is a widespread expectation of famine on any unprecedented scale in many parts of the world. The experts tend to differ only in their estimates of when those famines will begin. Some think by 1980; others think they can be saved off until 1990; very few expect that they will not occur by the year 2000.

"That is the problem. Unless we can be surer than we now are that this generation has a future, nothing else matters. It's not good enough to give it tender, loving care, to supply it with breakfast foods, to buy it, expensive educations. Those things don't mean anything unless this generation has a future. And we're not sure that it does.

"I don't think that there are problems of youth, or student problems. All the real problems I know about are grown-up problems.

"Perhaps you will think me altogether absurd, or 'academic,' or hopelessly innocent – that is, until you think of the alternatives–if I say, as I do to you now: We have to get rid of those nuclear weapons. There is nothing worth having that can be obtained by nuclear war – nothing material or ideological – no tradition that it can defend. It is utterly self-defeating. Those atomic bombs represent an unusable weapon. The only use for an atomic bomb is to keep somebody else from using one. It can give us no protection – only the doubtful satisfaction of retaliation. Nuclear weapons offer us nothing but a balance of terror, and a balance of teror is still terror.

Venereal disease continued to be a problem in 1968. There was a slight increase in the incidence of both syphilis and gonorrhea. Much of it in teenagers.

So far, syphilis could be successfully treated by penicillin, but all known contacts of a diagnosed infectious case had to be found, examined and brought to treatment if infected. An increasing number of people have become allergic to pencillin, and this posed a problem. Other drugs, fortunately, will cure the disease.

Gonorrhea became much more of a problem. Many of the patients were young; one was only 12 years old. The strain of the disease found most often in this area was no longer cured by penicillin. It was, moreover, becoming resistant to other forms of treatment.

Because of the difficulties we were having with V.D., education of teenagers became important. A film was first shown to parents to enlist their approval of a program to inform students of the dangers of these diseases. For the first time, seventh and eighth graders were included. A few of the younger children were confused, but most of them understand. The question-answer period after the talk and film brought some unbelievable querries, all of which were answered honestly. We may not have changed the behavior patterns, but if not, we will have better informed sinners.

Two Juveniles Charged With Auto Thefts

Sikeston police, early today, apprehended two local juveniles in connection with the theft of two cars and a burglary Thursday.

U.D. Wethington, 117 Reuben St., reported his station wagon was stolen from the Pure Oil truck stop, south of Sikeston about 3 a.m.

About two hours later the car and two juveniles were spotted on the south edge of Sikeston.

When the police stopped them, they were driving another car reported stolen in Charleston. Both stolen automobiles were recovered.

It is also believed two juveniles burglarized Proffer's Grocery at Matthews Thursday.

Store manager Joe Settles said 40 to 50 cartons of cigarettes and other items were taken.

Tax Increase Almost Ready for Senate Poll

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Only technical changes remained today before a proposed income tax increase bill is submitted to Missouri's 34 senators for a poll of their sentiments.

If 18 of them approve, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes plans to call a special legislative session about Sept. 8, to provide the revenue to solve a fiscal crisis expected in the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham D-Columbia, Senate majority leader, said after a conference of House and Senate leaders with tax experts Thursday he thought some progress had been made in clarifying the state's need for more revenue.

He helped defeat a proposed individual income tax increase in the regular session along with Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, the President Pro Tem. Vanlandingham said he still doesn't like the idea but now is convinced more revenue is needed.

Blackwell had scheduled a news conference to express his continued opposition to the plan but failed to show up.

Newsmen had hoped to quiz him about his tangled marital situation but he did not appear. He has made no comment on that subject since his marriage in Las Vegas, Nev., to his 26 year-old secretary, Carolyn Sue Ravenscraft.

In many ways Thursday's discussion sounded like a rerun of the regular legislative session last spring when disputed revenue figures flew around.

Sen. Richard M. Webster, R Carthage, one of the opponents of a personal income tax increase, said he is still against it. He said he came to Jefferson City expecting to discuss a compromise but found instead the same bill that was defeated is still being proposed.

Both he and Sen. Edward T. Linehan, D-St. Louis, another opponent, continued to question Revenue Department figures and projections.

As drafted, the bill would raise individual and corporate income taxes by about $65 million for one full year's collections. Individual rates would go from a top of 4 per cent to 6 per cent for the highest income brackets and the corporate maximum from 2 to 5 per cent.

Correction

In Friday's Standard a story about the City water system reported that an open house at the Waterworks building would be held Saturday. Construction is underway at the plant and an open house will be announced for a later date, Manager Dick Inman said today. The newspaper was misinformed about an open house scheduled for Saturday.

therefore are proposing amendments which would increase farm income, Secretary Hardin and the Bureau of the Budget are caught in a budget squeeze, and therefore will propose amendments designed to overproduction costs.

"The great need is for policies and programs which will increase farm income without increasing government costs, for improvements which will reduce costs without reducing farm income.

"In recent years, proposals to limit payments to a maximum of 5, 10, 20 or 25 thousand dollars to an individual producer have received increasing approval in the House of Representatives. Right now, as your outstanding Congressman Bill Burlison well knows, the agricultural appropriation bill passed by the House on May 27 and by the Senate on July 27 has not yet gone to conference because of the demand in the House for payment limitations.

"Secretary Hardin and others who have studied these proposals conclude that the supply adjustment goals of the annual programs could be achieved even though large farm program payments were limited, but they also warn these limitations could result in increased surpluses; and therefore increased government storage costs.

"Any payment limitation would affect more cotton growers than wheat or feed grain producers; but out of 449,376 cotton growers who received payments in 1968, only some 5,000 would be affected by the $20,000 limitation voted by the House this year.

"If a payment limitation were at the lowest level ever proposed, only 8 percent of the cotton producers, namely 34,000, would be affected; and this would probably result in record production and record surpluses of cotton in storage.

"Note also that a $5,000 payment limitation would affect only 3 percent of the wheat producers and but 2 percent of the feed grain producers.

"As you all know, I do not believe in the principle of limiting payments to individual farm operators, who help all of agriculture by limiting their production. We do not put a ceiling on the benefits to a great corporation like General Motors from the standpoint of protection through tariffs, or to the big oil companies from oil import quotas. Nor to the large magazines from mail subsidies.

"Despite problems of payments limitation and its obvious unfairness, some of the most knowledgeable of our farm leaders believe a continuation of existing programs, even though subjected to a payment limitation, would be far better than no program at all. This may be a choice which will have to be made at some time in the future.

"According to our best estimates, if the Congress is unable to agree on an extension of current commodity programs, farm income will drop by approximately 5 billion dollars--3.5 billion dollars in payments along with up to 1.5 billion dollars in lower farm income due to overproduction and lower prices.

"We have many other domestic economic problems and situations abroad which are both costly and tragic.

"So let us all work together to develop the best possible farm programs; for cotton, for food and feed grains, for the wise utilization of our abundance in feeding and clothing the hungry and naked. In that way we will have more prosperous agriculture, and a more secure America, and a better world in which to live."

Jack Tipton, Caruthersville, M.C.P.A. chairman, presided.

Symington and his aide, Stanley Fike, were flown to Sikeston this morning by Ray Clinton.

Following a luncheon, directors of the association met to set the date for the 21st annual Missouri Cotton Producers association meeting in Sikeston in April.

Eagleton, who is taking advantage of a Congressional recess to make a three-day tour of Southeast Missouri was present at a non luncheon where Symington was the principal speaker.

Eagleton told a dinner audience in Kennett Thursday that Congress's new hard look at money quests from the Pentagon has been overshadowed by debate over the controversial Safeguard Antiballistic Missile system.

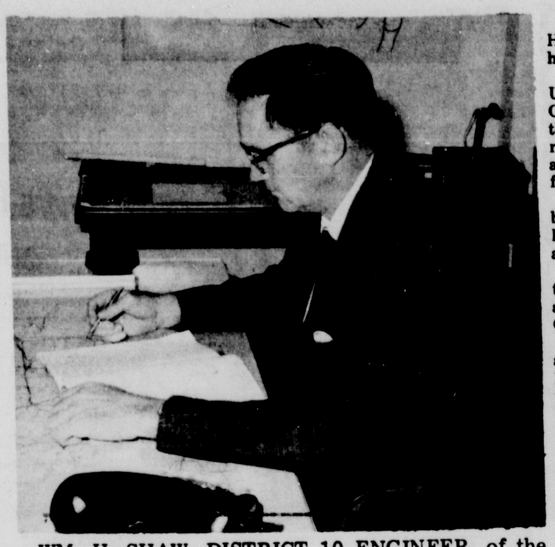
District 10 Highway Unit Headquartered in Sikeston

Organized Leader Is Bill Shaw



WM. H. SHAW, DISTRICT 10 ENGINEER, of the state Highway department has worked with the Missouri State Highway Dept. for 20 years.

His office isn't elaborate or particularly private. The floor is tile and the walls are painted pale green, just like the remainder of the office building at the District 10 Highway Dept.

Wm. H. Shaw's office is separated from the various secretaries and clerical workers on the highway department's main floor, by a wooden partition.

Bill Shaw doesn't need an elaborate, secluded office in order to supervise a business.

His key to success is organization.

In three glass bookshelves to his left, Shaw keeps numerous volumes of large books.

The books are so large and the book shelves are so clean nd neat, one might guess the books are there just for show, and that Shaw has no idea as to their contents.

That's wrong. When a question arises, particularly pertaining to statistics or past activities, which Shaw cannot answer, he immediately chooses the coorect book from the shelves to supply the answer.

If a book won't do it, a telephone is just an arm's reach away. The district engineer uses the phone frequently to call various department heads or secretaries who supply him with information he doesn't have at hand.

Bill Shaw doesn't assume and he doesn't provide approximations when the facts are needed.

But Shaw isn't all business. His three children keep him and his wife, Marta, busy.

Paula, 20, a junior at the University of Missouri, Columbia, is the movie critic of the family. She recommends movies for my wife and I to see all the time, Shaw said, but so far, I haven't liked her taste.

Doug, 17, and Mark, 14, are both in Senior High School and keep their Dad busy with school activities.

Shaw took a week away from the office this summer to serve as a counselor at Boy Scout Camp Lewallen.

He has been district engineer at the Sikeston office since 1967. Before coming here, he worked at the highway department in Jefferson City for six and one half years.

While there, he served as field liaison engineer, division of traffic and maintenance and as utilities engineer of surveys and plans.

Prior to living in Jefferson City, the Shaws lived in Sikeston. Then, Shaw served as resident engineer designer.

A native of Illmo, Shaw attended Southeast Missouri State College and the University of Missouri, Rolla, as a civil engineering major.

He has been with the Missouri State Highway Dept. for 20 years.

The family attends the First United Methodist Church. Shaw is a member of the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers and he is a registered engineer and land surveyor.

Traffic Safety Program Planned

This summer, the highway department began compiling data for a safety modification program which will get into full swing on Interstates 55 and 57 in January.

The program will cause workmen to change guard rails, signs and medium obstructions so the devices will comply with traffic rules which recently have gone into effect.

Guard rails will be modified so the end of the rails will curve down and fasten to the ground.

The rails, now, are curved out toward the highway and are easily sent through automobiles during accidents.

The downward curved rails will be less likely to cut through automobiles in accidents.

Drainage devices now used will be removed and flush grates will be installed.

Also, highway signs will be moved further from the road, to assure greater safety.

Some guard rails, which were destroyed in traffic accidents, have been replaced according to the change called for by the safety modification program. The new rails may be seen on I-55 between Cape Girardeau and Sikeston.

FLASHING LIGHT SIGNALS, estimated to cost $12,000, were installed at the railroad crossing on Salcedo Road this summer. For the Missouri Public Service Commission to order such a light, one or more conditions must exist. Train speeds should exceed 60 miles per hour; railroad and highway traffic should exceed 1,200 vehicles per day; at least one train should pass through per day or restricted visibility should exist. The highway department paid 90 per cent of the cost and the railroad paid 10 per cent.

Highway Department Has Annual Payroll Over Three Million

Highway Department Has Annual Payroll Over Three Million At the District 10 Highway Dept., 566 full-time employes and 100 to 125 part-time employes make up an annual payroll of approximately $3,800,000. About $1,100,00 of this amount is distributed in he Sikeston area.

The employes work in one of several departments including administration, construction, legal, equipment, maintenance, materials, right-of-way and surveys and plans.

These departments are responsible for the design and construction of the highways, the acquistion of the rights-of-way and the maintenance of highways after completion.

The maintenance department spends about 1.25 million dollars annually on routine operations. About $750,000 of this amount is spent in leveling or rebuilding the surface of many of roads.

This type of work consists of placing a road mix oil surface on the roadway with maintenance equipment. The work is not included with regular construction projects.

Other routine maintenance operations are mowing rights-of-way, replacing damaged signs, guard rails and bridge railings.

The construction department is currently supervising projects costing more than $20,000,000. Construction work is supervised by eight resident engineers who are located throughout the District 10 area.

The most complicated project underway now, and one which won't be completed for several years, is the bridge across the Mississippi River at Caruthersville.

The materials department works in conjunction with the construction department. Their duty is to inspect all material used in the construction of the highways.

The right-of-way department appraises and negotiates property required for incorporation into highways.

The department also provides relocation assistance to persons whose homes are acquired for highway purposes.

The surveys and plans department surveys land and prepares detailed design plans for the construction of roads.

Surveys and plans works on numerous projects at the same time because it takes five years to complete preliminary stages of construction projects.

Currently, surveys and plans is working on various projects which will cost more than $48,666,000.

Equipment personnel keep all vehicles belonging to the highway department in top operating condition.

Administration personnel process all invoices, issue over-dimension permits and handle the accounting duties.

Several Projects Are Completed During Summer

Numerous plans and projects have progressed or been completed this summer in the District 10 Highway Dept. area.

INTERSTATE 55

Contracts have been awarded for the installment of basic lighting on the road and ramps on the Interstate 55 interchanges at Miner and Scott City. Work should begin on these projects in the next couple of weeks.

Work is nearing completion on I-55 in Pemiscot County from a south of Portageville to north of Hayti. Grading, paving and bridge work are being done.

Rest area beautification on I-55 in New Madrid and Pemiscot & Counties near Marston and Steele is completed. Shrubs and trees were planted, and dead plants were replaced.

Improvements on I-55 in Cape Girardeau and Scott Counties from Scott City to route 74 is complete. Bridge approach slabs were replaced, some guard rails were changed and some resurfacing was done.

Bids will open Aug. 29 for the letting of I-55 from Fruitland to the Perry County line. Construction of this 13½ mile stretch of road will include the construction dual rest areas.

IN AND NEAR SIKESTON

On route 61, north of Sikeston, at Tanner Road, the pavement was raised as much as 10 inches in some spots, to minimize the possibility of kwater crossing the pavement during heavy rain.

Design work for the construction of a four-lane highway along Main Street from the North Y to the Holiday Inn is has progressed sufficiently enough to permit a public hearing in the near future. Wm. H. Shaw, district engineer, said he hopes for a 1971 letting date for the project.

Bids for the complete reconstruction of route Y, from North Kingshighway to Salcedo will be advertised soon. This project was advertised once this summer, but the only bid received was excessive. A 22-foot roadway will be built here and six-foot shoulders will be added.

COUNTY ROADS

Construction is 40 per cent complete on Butler County route 67 from Poplar Bluff north to the junction of route 60. A four-lane highway is being built. there.

Cape Girardeau route K from I-55 to route 61 is complete. The road is a four-lane facility.

Sixty per cent of the work is completed on New Madrid County route WW from New Madrid east to the River levee. A new road and two bridges are being constructed there.

Seventy per cent of the work is complete on Scott County route M from Scott City to Chaffee. Reconstruction and some relocation is being done.

Work on the reconstruction of Stoddard County route 25 through 25 is 95 per cent complete.

MAINTENANCE

Besides mowing rights-of-way, picking up litter and maintaining the planting of shrubs and flowers, maintenance crews have 70 per cent of the work on a 630-mile leveling course programs which improves the surface of low-type bituminous roads.

OTHER WORK

Painting of the Mississippi River Bridge in Cape Girardeau is progressing slowly, but it will be completed this year.

Resurfacing and shoulder work is complete on route 61 through Perry County. This roadway is in the District 6 area, but a personnel shortage there, caused District 10 to work the project.

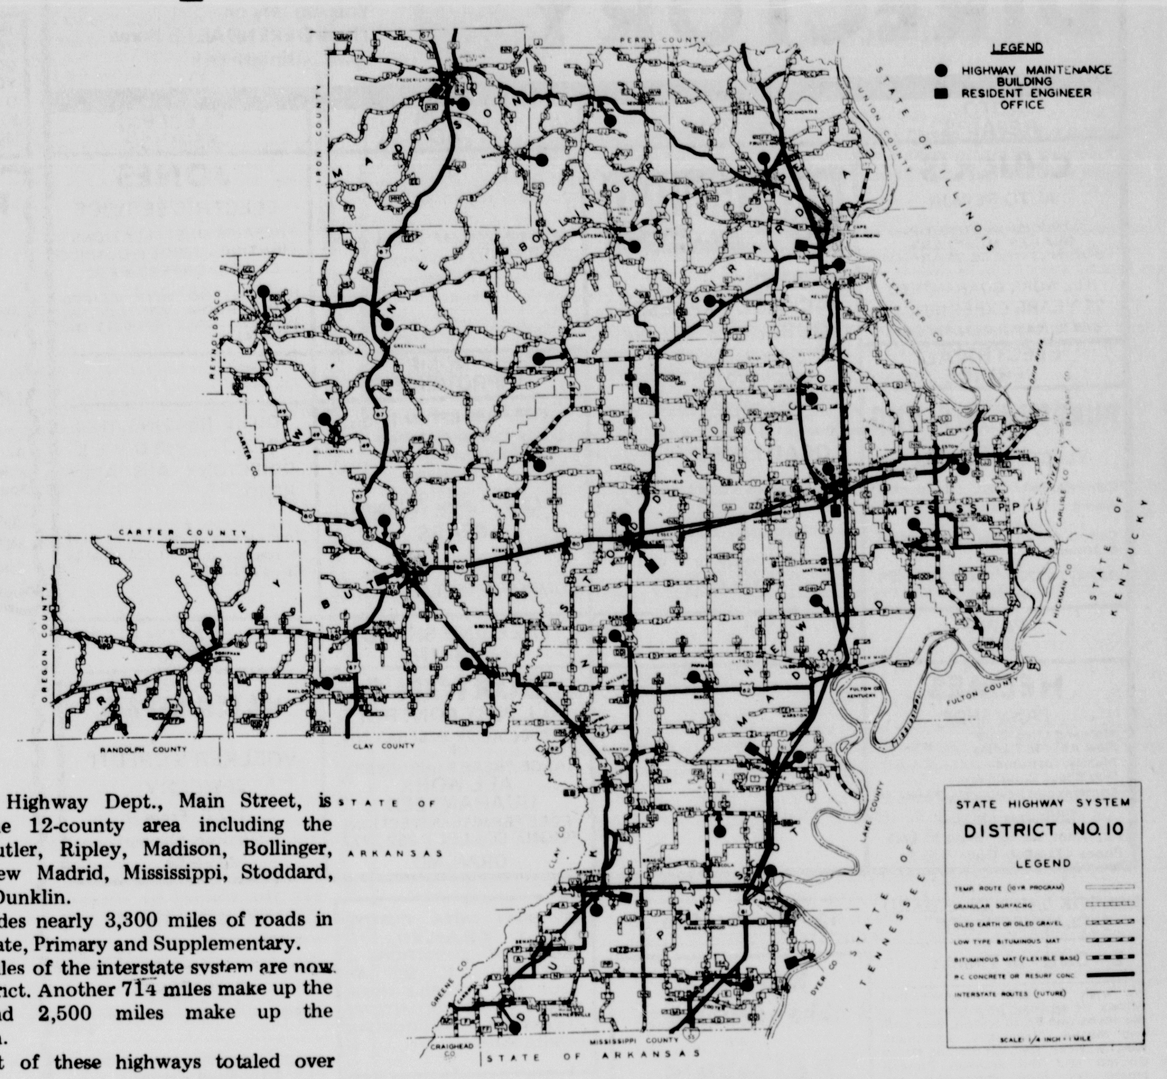
COLOSSAL KITCHEN

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Coliseum's banquet and dining facility — the largest in Manhattan — utilizes a recently expanded kitchen that can serve 5,000 people at one sitting. At the center of the all-gas-fueled kitchen that occupies a block and a half of space is a giant precision oven weighing more than nine tons.

The rotary oven can prepare thousands of pounds of meat or poultry at a time, and it is programmed so that every portion receives equal degrees of heat.



The District 10 Highway Dept., Main Street, is headquarters for the 12-county area including the counties, Wayne, Butler, Ripley, Madison, Bollinger, Pemiscott, Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Cape Girardeau, and Dunklin.

The district includes nearly 3,300 miles of roads in three systems, Interstate, Primary and Supplementary.

More than 100 miles of the interstate system are now completed in the district. Another 714 miles make up the primary system and 2,500 miles make up the supplementary system.

Construction cost of these highways totaled over $161,700,000.

Civil Engineers Are Department's First Preference

Students often have a difficult time finding summer employment because most employers aren't looking for three-month employes. When students do find summer jobs, the pay is often low.

An exception to this rule of employment is the District 10 Highway Dept. Three-month employes are welcome there, and they are welcomed with a salary which runs over $2 an hour.

"Most of our road work is done in the summer, and we always need plenty of extra workers," Wm. H. Shaw, district engineer said.

This summer the highway department hired 112 students out of 300 who applied.

The hiring is not done at random, however.

First preference is given to students majoring in civil engineering and who have already taken some civil engineering courses.

Second preference is given to students majoring in some form of engineering other than civil and who have already taken some courses in their major field.

Third preference goes to non-engineering students enrolled in a scientific curriculum such as math or physics.

Final preferences is for high school graduates who plan to enter college as an engineering student or as a student in a related scientific field.

In the District 10 area, there is a maintenance building for every 100 miles of road. Each building has six to 15 employes.

For every three to four buildings, there is an area supervisor. In District 10, there are ten area supervisors. The entire district has two maintenance supervisors and one maintenance and traffic engineer.

District 10 has eight resident engineer offices throughout the area. Registered engineers or civil engineer graduates supervise these offices.

All offices including maintenance, construction, legal, equipment, administration, materials, right-of-way and surveys and plans, are headquartered in Sikeston.

Fifteen field mechanics travel throughout the area to keep equipment in shape at the resident engineer offices and the maintenance buildings.

Mississippi River Bridge Construction Has Begun

Work began this summer on a long-range project--the construction of a Mississippi River Bridge on Interstate-55 from south of Caruthersville to Dyersburg, Tenn.

The first contract was let to Massman Construction Co., Kansas City. The company is building main bridge piers and sub-structures for steel approach slabs.

Presently, the contractors are moving equipment and materials into the construction site. Sand-island construction for the first bridge pier will begin in a few weeks.

This first contract cost $8 million. At least two more contracts will be let before the bridge, is completed.

The project, which will take four years to complete, will be financed by Missouri and Tennessee. Each state will pay the cost for construction in each respective state.

Massman Construction Company is also building a Mississippi river bridge in Memphis.

Originated Expression

The expression, "Poor as Job's turkey," was originated by a rustic humorist named "Sam Slick." It was intended to indicate someone who was even poorer than the Biblical Job, who was the very personification of poverty.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Some Helpful Hints For World Travelers

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I am answering the "Older Couple" who are planning a European trip in the late summer. I would suggest taking an unlined knit suit with a jacket loose enough that a sweater could be worn under it if necessary. A cotton suit or jacket dress of a seersuckerlike material would be ideal. Absolutely essential, I think, are two pairs of comfortable walking shoes. I like to have one with wedge heels and nonslip soles and another pair of oxfords. Other essentials are raincoats, one the all-weather type and the other an inexpensive, thin plastic one that can be folded and carried in one's purse to be ready for sudden showers.

Sacrifice dressy extras if necessary. There are few places one will not feel well-dressed for dinner in a sleeveless or short-sleeved dress that may have its own jacket or a sweater to be put around the shoulders AND a pair of low-heeled pumps for an after-dinner stroll. Another extra I enjoy is a silk bag (pack costume jewelry in it) that is deep enough for your passport unless you are using a joint one with your husband. You will get tired of carrying your big travel pocketbook all the time.

Unless you are sure your husband will not get bored shopping and that there is no chance of missing connections, it is a good idea to have your own passport and some traveler's checks with you at all times for an emergency. This would not be so likely to happen on a conducted tour. All the above should be qualified by remembering that you can always run into "unusual" weather anywhere. Have a fine journey.—ADDELI

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am desperate and need help. The chrome on my dishwasher is being ruined by hot water splashing on it from the sink. It has to stand sideways against the sink as the hose is on the front. I have tried covering it with a towel, I wipe it dry after each use but all the spots will not come off. I have tried many cleansers, including vinegar, but nothing works. Our water is very hard, which is no help.—MRS. D. B.

DEAR POLLY—I work in a hospital and have to keep a pen in my uniform pocket. To help keep the pocket and uniform free from ink stains I keep a long, narrow eyeglass case in my pocket and slip the pen into this case.—ELIZABETH

DEAR POLLY—When I mow the grass I attach an empty clothespin bag to the mower and when I come to a rock or a piece of paper I just throw them into this bag.—DORICE

If You Were the Judge

School Can Banish Boy from Team

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Seventeen-year-old Chuck was the All-American super-star of his high school. He had it all--brains and athletic ability. But a little blonde co-ed in his English class twittered her eye lashes at him and his troubles began.

Chuck fell in love with the chick and, with parental consent, they were married. The next thing he knew, however, he was tossed off the school football team which was worse than telling him he couldn't eat any more banana splits. It seemed that there was a school rule prohibiting married students from engaging in extra-curricularactivities.

"That rule wasn't meant for someone like me," protested Chuck. "Considering my marks and my athletic accomplishments, to keep me off the football team would be to make a bad example of a good example."

"There are no exceptions to the rule," was the answer. "High school students who get married have a bad effect upon other students. The less they have to do with each other the better."

Determined to get back on the football team, Chuck made his demand for reinstatement in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you direct that Chuck be allowed to continue to carry this school baners down the gridiron?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! He held that a court cannot interfere with the rules of a school board unless the rules are arbitrary and unreasonable. In this case, concluded the judge, the rule was reasonable since it discouraged marriage in high school which breeds improper conduct between unmarried students. What's more, it causes other students to get married and then drop out of school when they find they cannot handle their scholastic as well as domestic difficulties.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith. (Hebrews 12:1-2)

PRAYER: Gracious heavenly Father, give me strength for drooping arms, support for shaking knees, and courage for my fainting heart. So may I continue to be about the work in Thy kingdom. Amen.

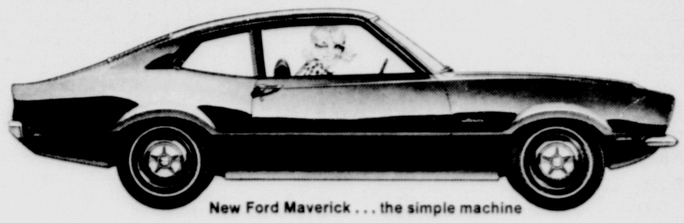
reasons why Maverick is the fastest-selling new car in automotive history!

Our little car is making a big hit. In its first 100 days Maverick has outsold every new car ever introduced. And every day more and more smart drivers are discovering the fun of owning the simple machine. Take a few minutes to find out why Maverick's so popular. Then take a test drive at your Ford Dealer's.



New Ford Maverick . . . the simple machine

1. LOW PRICE. Maverick is the best seller of the '70s at 1960 prices. And you get your money's worth. A complete car all ready to drive home.
2. LOW FUEL BILLS. In tests by professional drivers at our tracks, where we do our best to duplicate actual driving conditions, Maverick averaged 22.5 mpg. (Some Maverick owners report they get 25 mpg and better.)
3. 105 HORSES. Maverick's high-spirited Six gives you nearly twice as much horsepower as the leading import's engine. You get fast acceleration, easy passing.
4. PEOPLE-SIZED INTERIOR. Maverick pinches pennies, not people. Its front seat gives you nine inches more shoulder room than the leading import. Plus lots of leg room, hip room and head room.
5. EASY HANDLING. Maverick can outmaneuver the leading economy import. It can U-turn in a tighter circle, nip around corners and slide into tight parking spaces with amazing agility.
6. FEWER SERVICE CALLS. Maverick is actually easier and less expensive to maintain than an economy import. Maverick oil changes come only once every 6,000 miles and chassis lubrications once in 36,000 miles. The leading import recommends an oil change twice as often and a chassis lubrication six times as often. (Maverick gives you economy without inconvenience!)
7. SIMPLE SERVICE AND REPAIRS. The Maverick Owner's Manual has 24 pages of instructions for routine maintenance jobs you can do yourself, if you wish. You can change spark plugs, replace fuel filter, adjust ignition timing, and more. Even a smashed grille can be replaced in as little as 13 minutes.
8. WIDE-OPEN TRUNK SPACE. No more cramming in luggage just because you have a small car. Maverick gives you 10.4 cubic feet of luggage space—nearly twice as much as the leading import. (With Maverick, you can take it with you.)
9. SOLID DURABILITY. Maverick's unitized body construction makes it light, strong and durable. (And Maverick's 3-speed transmission is tough enough to handle twice as much horsepower as the engine turns out.) (Maverick may be little, but you don't have to treat it like a kid.)
10. BUILT-IN SAFETY. Unlike most economy imports, Maverick's tread is wider than the car is high. That means stability—mighty important when the road is wet or the wind is strong.

Taxpayers Association Official Blasts Away at Daily Standard

By DAN WHITTLE

BENTON -- A. W. Phegley, Chaffee, an officer of the Scott County Taxpayers Association, scattered stinging statements last night for nearly an hour in the court house. Sixteen attended the association meeting.

Phegley launched his attack by saying a story in The Sikeston Daily Standard newspaper Tuesday "pretty well whitewashes" the Scott county court and he said the Standard, along with the Scott County Democrat, in Benton, "does much of the county court's (commercial) printing."

He also charged the Standard with having stories that carried wrong information "all the way through" since the association was organized a month ago.

In an interview following the meeting, Phegley claimed he knew of three instances where wrong information was reported. The first instance he cited appeared in a news story last Friday when he claimed Judge J. E. Childress, Sikeston, runs the county court and the two othcr judges. Phegley then admitted making the statement, but added things were omitted from what he said before and after he charged Childresss with running the county court. Phegley then said he could not remember the two other "misquotes."

A. W. PHEGLEY, Chaffee, standing, blasts the Sikeston Daily Standard at a Scott County Taxpayers Association meeting in Benton last night. He holds a copy of the paper in his hands. Seated is Louis Heiserer, Illmo, chairman of the Association.

He said the newspaper has carried stories that generally make the organization appear in opposition to any form of taxation. The group was formed after the county's property assessments were increased by $7 million, of which $5 million was on farm land.

The story that he charged was a "whitewash" appeared after an interview with Hunter Phillips, chairman of the State Tax Commission, who said the Scott county court went about raising assessments in the proper manner. The commission ordered the court to raise the assessments after it was found that city property was assessed at about 22 per cent and farm property about 18 per cent. The legal ratio is a 30 per cent assessment.

The county court claims to have raised only those properties that were below 30 per cent rather than order an a blanket increase, which it contends would compound existing inequities.

The county court contends the tax books are more uniform and fair than ever before as a result of selective increases.

When the taxpayers group was first organized, primary purpose was to get the county court to rescind the increase order or order a blanket increase. The court has refused to do either.

Phegley said last night the increase was unfair and unequal. Phegley expressed a desire to debate Phillips. He said Phillips, Gov. Warren Hearnes and a group of attornies at Charleston need to be checked regarding relationships. Speaking specifically about attornies, Phegley mentioned "the ones that issued an opinion last week." That was done by the Joslyn and Joslyn law firm in Charleston after a request was made for an opinion regarding the assessment increases.

In the firm's printed opinion, it was stated the group could not be represented collectively in protests of the assessment increase. Attorney L. D. Joslyn said each case varies and would have to be appealed individually.

About 40 farmers appealed to the Scott County board of appeals Monday regarding the increase.

After complaints about the news media and others, Phegley had a confrontation with fellow association member Dewey Dicus, Benton, regarding a $10.30 bill for pamphlets that were not used by the organization.

Dicus apparently had hand bills printed advertising a protest march on the courthouse. Association Chairman Louis Heiserer, Illmo, told Dicus it was implied the association was behind the protest march. The association he said, connected with the incident, which occurred Aug. 4 when about 60 northern county farmers gathered at the court house to protest the increase to the county court.

Some of the protestors asked the county court to rescind the increase.

Chairman Heiserer had to bang on the table to restore order.

During the argument, Phegley told members of the press not to print or record any of the statement already made. Phegley walked over to this newsman and said "If you print any of this, I will call Charley (Blanton) and tell him you did it after we told you not too."

Phegley said members of the press could either disregard the incident or leave the room, which was the circuit court room. No member of the press left the room.

Prior to this, Phegley complained that a rumor is being circulated in the court house indicating he backed down Monday from the county court or one of its members.

Phegley claims that anyone who says he was "pushed into a corner" is a "damned liar."

He said he had had conferred with Sheriff John Dennis about the matter and said Dennis told him he didn't personally believe it, Phegley said the sheriff told him "You (Phegley) don't push. I've known you too long."

Phegley said the board of appeals, which is made up of members of the county court and county Assessor Andy Halter, adjusted his increase by $1,200 but he doesn't want the adjustment because it might hurt his case when he goes to the state to make an appeal.

Phegley said members of the county court don't think "any votes come from out in the county." He took issue with this and said "we'll show Sikeston" something.

Phegley, who is also a member of the group's by-laws committee, said the committee felt it best the group should incorporate and become a non-profit organization.

Regarding other by-laws, which are yet to be drawn up, Phegley told of committees to get the county assessor office out of politics, to investigate political candidates and for fund raising.

Phegley outlined plans that call for quarterly meetings by the organization.

Last week the organization decided to seek an opinion from State Attorney General John Danforth regarding whether members of the county court can rise property assessments and then set on the board of appeals. Phegley said a meeting will be called regarding this.

Council to Set Election Date

The city council will convene at 9 a.m. Saturday to set an election date for residents to decide on a cable television franchise and the annexation of about 600 acres of land into the city limits. The land is located to the southeast of Sikeston.

The CATV franchise would be granted See-Mor, a Kansas based firm.

The land, if annexed, would be used for new industrial sites.

County Wants to Buy Landfills

HILLSBORO, Mo. (AP)—The Jefferson County Court said Thursday it plans to submit a bond issue proposal to voters to buy and operate three landfills in a move to stop St. Louis County from using them.

The court issued a statement saying St. Louis County officials found it "politically expedient not to locate additional landfills in their own county." The court said since it can't stop St. Louis County from using privately owned landfills, it will submit the bond issue proposal to voters in August. The county would then be able to forbid haulers from other areas from using the landfills.

Presiding Judge Walter N. Steinburk said no estimate has been made yet of the cost. He said it would be considerable. He said the bond issue proposal would have to cover purchase of the land and equipment and labor to operate the landfills.

Blaiberg Heart Malfunctioning

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The transplanted heart of Philip Blaiberg, who was readmitted to Groote Schuur Hospital Thursday when his condition deteriorated, is working at only a third of its proper pressure, sources close to the hospital said today.

Doctors also have found that the kidneys of the world's longest heart transplant survivor are not functioning properly, these informants said.

Blaiberg, 60, has had his new heart for 591 days.

Tests seeking the cause of his relapse were understood to be continuing, but hospital authorities said there will be no bulletin on him today. A bulletin Thursday said only that he had been readmitted "for investigation following a deterioration in his condition."

Tree Limb Causes Fatal Injury

PERRYVILLE, Mo. (AP) — The Highway Patrol reported today that a Catholic brother died of injuries he suffered Wednesday when knocked off a hay truck by a tree limb.

The victim, Leo Feltz, 56, died at DePaul Hospital in St. Louis several hours after he was injured.

He was assigned to St. Mary's Seminary in Perryville. The accident occurred on a gravel road about two miles west of Perryville.

Nixon to Name Supreme Court Choice Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a controversy growing over the man widely mentioned as his choice, President Nixon is planning to disclose on Monday his nominee to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court.

"To my knowledge, he has a candidate firmly in mind," Ronald L. Ziegler, Nixon's press secretary, said Thursday at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif.

But the White House has refused comment on reports that Nixon wants U.S. Circuit Court Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., of Greenville, S.C., to take the seat that Justice Abe Fortas resigned in mid-May.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, at a news conference in New York Thursday, urged Nixon not to nominate Haynsworth.

Lindsay said the judge "lacks the philosophy and sensitivity required to carry on the traditions of Louis Brandeis, Felix Frankfurter, Benjamin Cardozo and Arthur Goldberg."

However, Lindsay said, three New York judges reported to be among those considered by the President "stand in this tradition." He listed them as Stanley H. Fuld and Charles D. Breitel, both of the state Court of Appeals, and Hny H. Fuld and Charles D. Breitel, both of the state Court of Appeals, and Henry J. Friendly, a federal appeals judge.

Civil Strife Spreads in Ireland

New Clash Blamed on Soviets

HONG KONG (AP) — The Soviets probably started the latest border clash by invading Chinese territory, Western analysts of Chinese military affairs said today.

All evidence here so far strongly indicates that the Chinese troops involved in the fighting were local security and local militia troops who were surprised by the Russian attack, analysts said.

They listed these factors and this reasoning:

—Accounts from Moscow of the fighting have emphasized that Soviet troops cut off Chinese border guards from "reinforcements."

It is likely that the cut-off "reinforcements" were troops of the professional People's Liberation Army who were camped some distance behind the border and who were attempting to reach the border as soon as fighting began.

—Moscow's announcement of the first fighting on Wednesday gave few details of Soviet casualties.

Soviet reports of Chinese-provoked battles have always given extensive accounts of Russians killed and wounded, with lengthy stories about the heroism of individual soldiers. But the Soviet press has given only scanty details of battles provoked by the Russian side.

This time, however, it has been Radio Peking that has given most of the details of the fighting, casualties and types of armored equipment and aircraft used by the Russians.

—Sinkiang is a "very poor province for China in security terms and the Chinese would be extremely unlikely to provoke anything there."

Chinese border policy in Sinkiang has been cautious because Chinese control of the area is relatively weak. Local minorities in he past have rebelled against Peking's authority and crossed the border into the Soviet Union, where many have relatives and friends. Soviet radio propaganda has encouraged these defections.

Collins Bound Over on Coed Slaying Charge

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A handsome young college student has been ordered to trial on a first-degree murder charge in the strangulation death of a pretty Eastern Michigan University freshman.

The victim, 18-year-old Karen Sue Beineman, was the latest of seven young women killed in a series of sex slayings in the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti area in the past two years.

The defendant, John Norman Collins, 22, is accused of murdering Miss Beineman last month and dumping her nude and battered body alongside a secluded road on the outskirts of Ann Arbor.

No charges have been filed in connection with the other six slayings.

Deake set Sept. 5 for Collins' arraignment on the charge in Washtenaw County Circuit Court.

Cotton Producers Hear Senators, Congressman

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, the state's junior senator, helped honor the state's senior senator today.

Sen. Stuart Symington, also a Democrat, was presented a plaque by the Missouri Cotton Producers Association.

Congressman Bill W. Burlison also participated. He presented the plaque. It was the first time that the three members of congress had appeared on a platform here together.

A meeting of the board of directors and township leaders of the Missouri Cotton Producers convened at the Ramada Inn at 10 a.m. There was a coffee for the wives.

Directors, leaders, their wives and guests, numbering more than 125 heard addresses by Senators Stuart W. Symington, and Thomas F. Eagleton.

Symington was introduced by Eagleton.

Burlison presented Symington with a 12 by 15 inch bronze plaque from the producers which read:

"To the Honorable Stuart W. Symington, in recognition of and appreciation for outstanding service to cotton and Southeast Missouri agriculture."

"I have become increasingly concerned about the problems of this the most important industry in our State: the production, processing and distribution of food and fiber," Symington said.

"It is trite, but it is true, that without a healthy farm economy, we cannot have real national security.

"For cotton, soybean and grain producers, the cost-price squeeze has intensified rather than eased over the past year.

"As recently as 1966, there was growing concern about the ability to satisfy world food needs. We were concerned about the capacity of American farmers to provide ample foods and fibers to satisfy domestic and foreign markets. But today, only 3 years later, we have idled almost 60 million acres of productive cropland and are currently producing sufficient wheat and soybeans which will add significantly to existing stocks.

"It should be stressed that, despite these millions of unused acres, we will be producing enough cotton and feed grains to fully supply domestic and foreign markets.

"You all are well acquainted with the developments that brought about this major change; but because of their continuing influence, I would like to review them briefly.

"The adoption of improved varieties of food grains, combined with better weather and increased use of fertilizers and insecticides in less developed countries such as India, Pakistan and the Phillipines have increased substantially the production of food grains in those countries; that development in turn decreasing the need for Public Law 480 shipments of wheat, rice and grain sorghums.

"Increased production of both cotton and man-made fibers abroad has decreased the demand for United States cotton exports; and increased use of man-made fibers at home has caused a reduction in the utilization of cotton. This has occurred to the extent that less than 8.5 million bales were used by domestic mills in the year ending July 31.

"Although livestock production has been expanding at a rapid rate, both at home and abroad, urea is being substituted for high protein cottonseed and soybean meals at an increasing rate in cattle feeding.

"This development, together with increased United States production of soybeans, and increased production of sunflower seed, especially in the Soviet Union, will result this year in the largest carryover of soybeans on record; and current prospects are for an even larger carryover in 1970.

"Increased technical and financial capabilities of large scale manufacturing firms assure a continued expansion of synthetic products that can only compete for agriculture's markets. A recent study in the United States Department of Agriculture concluded that synthetics and substitutes have taken 10 percent of the fats and oils market for soaps, 15 percent of the market for glycerine, 12 percent of the leather market for shoe uppers, 6 percent of the oilseed meal market, 9 percent of the citrus market; and although smaller percentages of the markets for wool, sugar, starch and fluid milk, these substitutes have taken 19 percent of the cotton market.

"With an excess capacity problem in agriculture and widespread hunger and malnutrition among our poor, it is not surprising that many people believe the farm problem could be solved by increasing the spending power of those with the lowest incomes. Those of us who helped expand the Food Stamp program in recent years believe we must continue to expand and improve our food stamp, school be solved by increasing the spending power of those with the lowest incomes. Those of us who helped expand the Food Stamp program in recent years believe we must continue to expand and improve our food stamp, school feeding and nutrition education programs, until they are available to all the hungry in our land

"It is noteworthy, however, to realize that even if the underprivileged were given an additional $3.5 billion for food expenditures, equivalent to all farm program payments in recent years, food consumption would be increased only 2 percent; and actually, consumption of food grains would probably decline, because low-income people usually reduce their cereal consumption, and increase their use of livestock products as their purchasing power goes up.

"Farmers of the United States have the capacity to produce 10 to 12 percent more farm products than can be marketed at the present time but only a small part of this excess capacity can be utilized profitably by means of expanded food stamp and school feeding programs.

"Analysts in the Economic Research Service conclude food expenditures would have to increase about $25 billion to expand demand for farm products sufficiently to replace, through the market, the $3.5 billion farmers now receive in direct payments.

"In view of this continuing problem of excess capacity in agriculture, it is encouraging to note that 17 farm and commodity organizations have joined together in recommending an extension of the basic features of the Agricultural Act of 1965. The more unity which can be developed among the people of agriculture, the greater our chance for sound legislation.

"I share the concern of a great American, Senator Allen Ellender, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, that the new Administration may attempt to substitute a massive long-range cropland retirement program for the annual commodity adjustment programs.

"Iowa State University and others have made studies which indicate lower annual costs could be attained with moderate long-term and retirement programs. Senator Ellender, who has done so very much for American farmers over the years, has wisely asked Secretary Hardin to evaluate these and other similar studies for his Committee.

"Secretary Hardin concluded that the actual cost of long-term cropland retirement would be far higher than the studies reported and that the production of the major crops--wheat, feed grains, soybeans and cotton--would be greater than in recent years even though 70 million acres were retired. Gross and net farm incomes would fall below the levels of recent years unless more than 70 million acres were retired.

"Just as farmers are caught in a cost price squeeze, and

Senator Besieged With Questions

BY E. J. MAYS
STATE EDITOR

MALDEN--"I am here today to find out the needs of MAMOS for a successful operation of its program as one of Pemiscot, New Madrid, Butler, and Dunklin counties' projects to aid the unemployed," U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton told 85 representatives of MAMOS today.

He pointed out he was a member of a Senate committee investigating such projects.

Conducting an hour and half program, the senator appraised MAMOS -- Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Service Incorporated -- for its fine work and stressed, "while I make no ironbound promise, I will do everything in my power to aid your causes, including welfare, job security and much-needed additional education facilities."

He was beseiged with questions, including:

"How to do away with sex and race discrimination when applying for a job, how a welfare person can go into a hospital without paying a $50 entry fee, why big manufacturing firms cannot handle their own job hiring and why additional time cannot be given the 23-week MAMOS training program."

Most of the criticism was leveled at brevity of training programs where farm persons are expected to learn skills in 23 weeks. MAMOS can enroll only farm background personnel.

One Negro woman brought applause when she told the Senator:

"We are being discriminated against because we are poor, not just because we are black. We don't want handouts. Just open the door to job opportunity, and we'll reach in and get what we want and need," she said.

Eagleton advised her that, "under President Nixon's request this week that welfare patrons be allowed to make an annual sum of $1,600, there should be an added incentive to work. Now you can go out and work -- at a minimum $2,250 in Missouri -- wh n this is approved," he said.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops moved by air and land to Belfast today as 15,000 Roman Catholics barricaded themselves behind burning trucks and toppled lampposts and prepared for battle.

Six hundred British troops were due to arrive at Aldergrover airport near Belfast in early evening. Hundreds more moved to the city by land.

London said the troops were entering Belfast "as friends of all the people in that city in order to ensure that, if humanly possible, there will be no further loss of life."

Northern Ireland's six provinces, known as Ulster, are still part of Britain, though they have some autonomy in domestic affairs.

The troops came after a night of vicious fighting in which 5 persons were killed and 192 were wounded.

Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark appealed to Roman Catholics and Protestants alike in a television broadcast.

"For heaven's sake stay off the streets tonight," he said. "Stay in your homes and do not do anything that will exacerbate the situation."

He blamed the outlawed Irish Republican Army for Thursday night's violence.

At the same time the Irish Republic announced it was calling up first-line reserves of its 13,000-man armed forces, and a spokesman in Dublin said the action was taken to have the troops "in readiness for a peace-keeping operation." He did not explain further.

The Roman Catholic south already has several hundred troops along Northern Ireland's western border to support and supply field hospitals set up to receive wounded fleeing from Northern Ireland.

In Dublin itself, a crowd of several hundred people screamed as the Union Jack was ripped from the first-floor flagpole of the British Embassy. About 70 Dublin police guarding the embassy watched impassively as the crowd pounced on the flag and ripped it apart in a tug-of-war.

Barry Murphy, the 23-year-old docker who climbed from balcony to balcony to reach the flag, said he and others were going north "to help the fight for civil rights."

An embassy window was broken and another cracked by stonethrowers.

Fighting between the police and Protestants on one side and Roman Catholics on the other ebbed as morning came. But hatred seethed between the Catholic minority and the Protestant majority, and Ulster's worst outbreak of violence in nearly 50 years appeared far from over.

The Royal Air Force flew 600 British infantrymen from England to fill the gaps left by British troops called to action in Londonderry for the first time since World War I. Londonderry was calm but uneasy.

Another 600 men of the Royal Green Jackets were being recalled from leave and put on standby "because of the seriousness of the situation" in Ulster, the British Defense Ministry announced.

There were fears that the night of violence, in which at least 42 persons were treated for gunshot wounds, may add new fuel to the rioting throughout Ulster cities.

Arrest in Home Theft

GIDEON -- Benny Baker, 23, route 1, Malden, has been arrested in connection with the burglary at 1 a.m. Thursday, of the Keith Summers' home near Gideon.

Extra Charge on Trucks Tabled

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A proposed extra charge for trucks delivering furniture and other goods to private homes was suspended for 120 days by the Public Service Commission today pending an investigation.

The proposed additional charge would range from about 60 cents to as much as $15. If the PSC had not acted, the new rates would have gone into effect Aug. 16.

The extra charge was proposed by the Middle West Motor Freight Bureau and would have affected all carriers in the state.

ON CAPITOL PUNISHMENT

The debate on capital punishment goes on year after year. There are strong arguments for its being retained and equally strong advocacy of its abolition. There are peripheral arguments as to which crimes should be included under the supreme penalty and which not. There are religious arguments, moral arguments and legal arguments. Few people are neutral and each side is certain that they hold the truly just view.

Thirteen states have abolished capital punishment. This includes New York, which still imposes the death penalty for the murder of a peace officer if he is acting in the line of duty, or upon a prison inmate for killing a guard or fellow inmate, providing the murderer is already serving a life sentence.

The number of executions per year even in states with a provision for capital punishment has declined steadily over the years and there are indications that the death penalty will disappear in the U. S. within the next decade.

One argument against the penalty is that it does not act as a deterrent to crime. This is speciousit seems to us. The sentence of death is not capital deterrent. It is capital punishment. It is a deterrent only in so far as the individual murderer is concerned.

Another argument against the death penalty is the haphazard manner in which it is imposed. Shrewd lawyers are capable of working around it, and clients able to pay the fees frequently beat the penalty. Those unable to pay must suffer the penalty. This should be corrected, of course.

We recognize and agree with the concern for the rights of the accused. Capital punishment is final and ineradicable once exacted. But what of the victims? Their suffering is often overlooked, particularly by those whose sympathies lie with the guilty. We advocate a sentence of life imprisonment where there is sufficient doubt, but we are equally in favor of the death penalth for those cases where doubt is not at issue.

IS THIS RECESS NECESSARY?

Early in the 1969 session, Congress set itself a series of holidays, the longest to begin Wednesday, Aug. 13 and extend through Sept. 3, or the comfortable Wednesday after Labor Day. Now, anyone will tell you that this is the precise time to be away from Washington. But the Washington Daily News (July 28) states another point of view: "This is a vacation Congress hasn't earned, doesn't need, and can't afford."

The paper points out that Congress hasn't delivered a single appropriation bill, though the budgetary year ended July 1. The lawgivers have been similarly leisurely on the income surtax and other levies which expired July 1. All manner of other measures -- reform of the electroal system, for example -- remain either in committee or in dreamland.

Recesses of Congress are nothing new. I fact they have achieved centennial precedence. Congress recessed from March 30 to July 1 and from July 20 to Nov. 21 to 1867. The second session of the same Congress, which could be labeled the lazy Fortieth, recessed from July 27, 1868, to Sept. 21, and from Oct. 6 to Nov. 10.

After that the idea of recess, despite Washington heat and humidity, seems to have lain dormant until the 78th Congress decided to have holidays. They ran from July 8 to Sept. 14 in 1943, and from June 23 to Aug. 1 the following year. Subsequently, one branch or both of Congress have taken breathers. This one, the 91st, already has had two shots at rest and recreation.

REFORMING WELFARE

President Nixon's long-awaited welfare reform message, originally scheduled for mid-June, will be telecast to the nation on the evening of Friday Aug. 8. The delay in large measure has been due to nation-wide concern about inflation -- concern that would tend to make a request for greatly increased welfare spending politically unwise. According to Daniel P. Moynihan, Presidential Assistant for Urban Affairs, Nixon "will propose a total change in the welfare system."

However, it is almost certain that the Nixon will fall far short of the guaranteed national income advocated by many experts and even the family allowance scheme favored by Moynihan. The most radical of the plans the President is known to be considering is the Finch-Moynihan. The most radical of the plans the President is known to be considering is the Finch-Moynihan proposal. This calls for a system of national standards to narrow the gap between state welfare payments and a system for supplementing the income of employed heads of families whose incomes fall below the poverty line. The latter plan, federally financed and administered, would eliminate the controversial A.F.D.C. (Aid to Families with Dependent Children). It is estimated that the plan could increase the present welfare budget by $2 to $3 billion.

The Finch-Moynihan proposal would do away with many of the present widespread criticisms that welfare is paternalistic, that it is conducive to broken homes (in many states, no money is given to families as long as the father remains in the home), that it is uneven from state to state, and that it is burdensome to local government. If not revolutionary, the plan is certainly forward-looking. A Gallup Poll of June 1968, in which a majority of Americans sampled opposed a guaranteed income but favored guaranteed employment, indicates that the country is not yet ready for totally new solutions to old problems.

CHALLENGE TO MR. NEWHOUSE

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg, acting in behalf of the Denver Post, plans to file suit in August against Samuel I. Newhouse, publisher of one of the country's largest newspaper chains. The objective of the suit is to force Newhouse to dispose of his 18.8 per cent interest in the Post, which he has been trying to acquire control of for several years.

Whatever the outcome, the case is bound to have wide repercussions in the communications industry. Goldberg says "It will be the first time that we shall be really challenging the newspaper and television monopolies that have been building up over the last decade." The Newhouse chain includes not only 22 newspapers but also seven television stations, four FM and three AM radio stations, 20 nationally distributed magazines, the Newhouse News Service, newsprint and rotogravure printing plants, and nine cable television systems. The entire operation is said to be worth between $200 million and $300 million.

Other media chains - - companies involved in both printed and broadcast media-- include Time Inc., Cowles Communications Inc., the Gannett Co., the Hearst Corp., the Washington Post Co., and Scripps - Howard. There are, in addition, numerous small communications combinations on a local level. According to the Federal Communications Commission, there were 73 communities as of late 1967 in which one person or company owned or controlled all of the local newspaper and broadcast outlets

The Justice Department and the F.C.C. both are taking a close look at the issue of concentration of media ownership. In a memorandum of Aug. 1, 1968, the Justice Department stated that "The clear effect of combined ownership of similar broadcast media in the same local market is to reduce the diversity of news and information sources available, and to lessen the degree of competition for advertising between these alternative media." And on Feb. 9, 1969, the F.C.C. said it would conduct a "broad-ranging inquiry to encompass the possible social, economic and political consequences in the broadcast field of the conglomerate trend and of the licensing of broadcasting stations to any other person or entity with other large- scale business interests."

During frontier days the pioneers used to take the edge of dullness off their lives by telling each other tall tales of the feats they had done and the wild critters they had conquered.

These yarn-spinning sessions were mostly flights of the imagination, in which each participant tried to outdo the preceding one. From these confabs probably emerged the saying, "The biggest liar is the last one."

In the business world of today, white collar workers still indulge in wild flights of the imagination. But instead of lying about what they did, they lie about what they didn't do—and what they didn't do is get to work on time.

A friend of mine in the personnel department of a large firm for years has made a hobby of collecting excuses given by employes for tardiness or absenteeism. They range from the commonplace to the wierdly fanciful.

"The most common of all," said my friend, "is—'My alarm clock didn't go off.' When a man or woman gives a lame excuse such as this, I know he isn't going to go very far in our organization.

"There certainly is no room in our executive ranks for people with such humdrum minds. On the other hand, if a man says he was late because his cat was having kittens, I consider he may have real creative talent and put him down for possible promotion."

Here are a few selections from his collection of excuses, followed by his own evaluations.

"I g

"My wife forget to wake me up at the regular time." This tendency to blame others probably shows up in his work. Ease him out at the first chance.

"What makes you think I was late? Can you prove it? Anyway, what ratfink in the office turned me in?" His aggressive traits might prove useful at a straw boss level, but I'm afraid he'll probably just turn out to be the next chairman of the union grievance committee.

"I had a hangover." Well, every office ought to be able to afford one honest man.

"Frankly, I took yesterday off because I'm so bored with my job I felt that if I showed up I'd probably commit hari-kari on your rug." Give him a better job, and six months to make good at it.

"I'm late because this pretty girl on the bus fainted, and I got so busy giving her mouth-tomouth resuscitation that I forgot all about what time it was." Better be nice to this liar. I'll probably be working for him in another 10 years.

"Here I am a half hour late—all because some jerk put his car in my parking space." Oh, oh, I hope he doesn't find out it's my car. I didn't think the boss was coming in today.

BLACK PANTHERS DISAPPOINTED IN COMMUNIST DEN

Raymond Johnson is a "Lieutenant" in the militant "Black Panthers". Last November, he so desperately desired to leave the United States that he hijacked a National Airlines jet to fly to his intended utopia, communist Cuba.

Now, after having spent eight months in the "paradise" of Fidel Castro, Raymond Johnson has nothing but complaints, - "The Panthers have not been received in a revolutionary fashion. We have been condemned to live in Cuba," he said.

Johnson complained that members of the "Black Panthers" have been imprisoned, isolated, banned from Havana, and told that in Cuba they would not be allowed to organize their party.

"We think there's racial discrimination in Cuba," he added, in noting that the Panthers were prevented from talking to black Cubans.

Eldridge Cleaver, who has the title of Information Minister of the "Black Panthers", was under indictment on a charge of attempted murder in California, when he jumped bail, and escaped to Cuba. He had denounced the United States vigorously, but it seems that he too has now become disillusioned by his stay in Castroland.

Cleaver recently turned up in Algeria, where he held a televised press conference. He expressed the desire to return to the United States, if he could make a deal to remain free on bond rather than be imprisoned.

Clearly, one of the things the "Panthers" miss about the United States is how relatively free they were to carry on their propaganda, and even subversion. Castro proved to be considerably tougher. There should be some kind of lesson in this for other revolutionaries who want to overthrow our Republic form of government.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS: Nixon bows to oil depletion reform; tells aides to forget campaign pledge; Oilmen stunned at beneficiaries' ingratitude.

WASHINGTON--In the matter of oil privileges, President Nixon has seen the handwriting on the voting-booth wall. Letters have been flooding into the White House and Congress from angry taxpayers denouncing the 27 ½ per cent oil depletion allowance. Result: The President has instructed his legislative aides to keep out of the depletion debate.

This will come as a rude awakening to the oil tycoons who contributed heavily to the GOP cause after getting Richard Nixon's assurance that the 27½ per cent oil write-off was sacrosanct with him.

He laid down the law to his own tax reformers that he wanted no change in the oil depletion allowance. The full 27½ per cent was necessary, he told them, to encourage investors to risk the high cost of drilling for oil. On this point, he said, his mind was made up.

He has now decided, however, not to esist the taxpayers' rebellion on Capitol Hill. In the back rooms of Congress, White House aides had argued against an oil depletion cut. Maryland Congressman Rogers C.B. Morton, the Cherubic GOP National Chairman, led the closed-door fight against the cut to 20 per cent. But the President, heeding the public mood, has now called off the opposition.

For the oil industry, the assaul on their cherished tax loophole has been a traumatic experience. The oil depletion statue had always been regarded as holy writ by the tax-writing house ways and means committee.

The late speaker Sam Rayburn had thoughtfully loaded the committee with oil loyalists. No one was admitted to this select circle who couldn't give Rayburn the right answer to one question: "Do you favor the oil depletion allowance?"

The oil industry ensured their loyalty by contributing heavily to their political campaigns. Both Democrats and Republicans are deeply indebted to the oil barons who spend an estimated $50 million a year to subsidize politicians and publicize the imaginary distress of the oil industry.

–Ungrateful Congressman–

Oilmen were stunned, therefore, over the 7½ per cent depletion cut by the faithful ways and means committee. When Chairman Wilbur Mills suggested a token reduction to appease the taxpayers, the Petroleum Institute's Frank Ikard hurried up to Capitol Hill to set Mills straight.

For two hours, Ikard lectured Mills on the inviolability of the 27 ½ per cent allowance. The oil lobbyist warned sternly that the tax exemption couldn't even be whittled down half of one per cent without injuring the industry.

Mills continued to believe that his oil friends' interests would best be served by offering the taxpayers a token reduction. He suggested a cut from 27½ to 23 per cent.

It was no less than Hale Boggs, the Congressman from the Oil State of Louisiana, who demanded a deeper cut to 20 per cent. He cast the decisive vote inside the committee in beating down, by a 13-12 margin, the lesser 4½ per cent cut.

On the subsequent house roll call over tax reforms, 26 of the 30 congressmen who voted against the bill came from the oil states of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. Boggs was the only Louisiana who voted for the reform bill. Nor was this the first time that Hale Boggs has shown courage. Though a Southerner he also helped lead the fight on the house floor for civil rights.

Now the oil lobbyists are counting upon Senate finance chairman Russell Long, their champion in the Senate, to save the 27½ per cent oil depletion allowance. They have boasted, privately at least, of a deal to get the Senate to restore 2½ per cent of the house cut. The Lobbying effort is directed by Ikard and by Dan Jones, Washington Counsel for the Independent Petroleum Association.

Actually, the 7½ per cent cut would still leave the oil industry with more tax privileges than any other industry. Last year, for example, manufacturing corporations paid 40 per cent of their pretax earnings in federal taxes. Oil companies paid only 11 per cent, and this was an all-time high. It used to be only 4 per cent.

In 1967, Atlantic-Richfield paid no federal income tax at all on profits of nearly $139 million. Standard Oil of California paid only one per cent on earnings of a half billion dollars.

Liberals in Congress believe the oil depletion allowance should be slashed at least another 5 per cent. This would still leave the Oil Industry with other tax loopholes. Even bigger than its depletion tax break is an allowance to write off in one year the intangible costs that other industries must spread over several years.

It will be interesting to watch the outcome of this classic battle between the public interest and a powerful private interest.

Blacks and Ballot Box:

It's tough to be black and moderately militant. Or moderate . . . It's like being stood up against a cellophane wall so both sides can snipe at you at the same time

It's been rough going for Negro leader Bayard Rustin. He's tough . . he knows what he wants. A. . he knows that violence will beget only bloody streets and tragically dead youth. So while he urges swift emergence of the black communities into the nation's mainstream, he urges his brethren to use the ballot box not the explosive powder box. For this he is called on "Uncle Tom" by the extremists.

They deride him, too, because he does not fault American labor as a mastadon grinding down all others. But despite criticism, Bayard Rustin has kept the faith, the peace and appears to be winning the fight for reason.

I asked him how it feels to be the man in the middle and to spell out his philosophy. Here is his reply, written exclusively for this column:

By Bayard Rustin

New York--In the long history of the black man in America, no decade has been filled with more significant events than the one which will terminate at the close of this year. In the 1960s we have witnessed great social and political triumphs, and also saddening defeats. We have seen men of great stature emerge and suddenly disappear. There has been an unprecedented rise in the hopes and aspirations of black people, and we have seen the frustrations of these hopes lead to despair, violence, and withdrawal. We would have to go back a century to the time of the Civil War and Emancipation, to find a decade that approaches in significance the one we are now living through.

The sweep and complexity of events demand that we resist the temptation of an emotional and simplistic response and instead try to analyze the present situation with the utmost precision. What is demanded of blacks, therefore, is not undirected rage, however compelling this emotion may be, but a clear definition of political and economic objectives, as well as a strategy for achieving them. In the absence of such a program for social struggle, rage can only feed upon itself and lead to comforting but self-defeating forms of withdrawal, or to violeence which would be destructive to all concerned. It will also induce in the white community the uncreative emotions of fear or guilt. This emotional dynamic of rage, fear and guilt is occurring with unusual force today, and its social consequences can only be reactionary. The prevalence of confusing emotions has led many people to identify white racism as the most pressing and immediate problem that must be solved. I reject this analysis, not because I think that white Americans are innocent of racism -- many, I'm sure, are guilty of prejudice, as are some people of all races – but because it cannot lead to a constructive programmatic solution to the plight of black Americans. In the firstst place, if we locate the source of the problem in the attitudes of white people, it follows that the solution must be mass psychoanalysis, something I find neither practical nor appealing.

More importantly, white breast-beating will hardly help the black youth who is unemployed or the black child who is being miseducated. But what it will do will be to compel the guilty individuals, by a soothing process of rationalization and self-delusion, to justify their position. Thus, unintentionally, and perhaps even unconsciously, they may eventually give their tacit approval to the growing white reaction against the movement for equality.

We have, therefore, to focus our attention on the social and economic conditions which have produced poverty, segregation, deteriorated housing, inferior schools, and poor health. If we can alter these fundamentals difficulties, I do not think it unlikely that we shall also see a marked reduction in rage, fear, and racism, as the emotions and attitudes of individuals adjust to new and more equitable social conditions.

Our task, then, must be to develop a political strategy and an economic program which attack injustice at its source. I am not concerned here with programs that might elect a local official or employ a few individuals, but with building a movement that can alter the fundamental social and economic relations in the society. What is essential, therefore, is to identify those iinstitutions which can provide black people with the maximum power and leverage in their efforts to achieve equality. The institutions I am referring to are the Democratic Party and the trade union movement, and the instruments that black people must use to make them more viable and progressive are the ballot box and the union card.

The Democratic Party is essential to the black struggle because it is the only mass-based political institution in the society that has the potential to become a majority movement for progressive social reform. Today it is not a majority party, and there remain within it powerful reactionary elements, particularly the Southern Conservatives. But at the Chicago convention many of these conservatives were driven out by insurgent delegations from Mississippi and Georgia composed of Negroes and white moderates. The dominant forces within the party are now precisely these groups -- Negroes, liberals, and the labor movement -- who form the basis of a majority coalition of the democratic left, and who thus can move the Federal government to act upon the problems which so afflict our nation. It is toward such a coalition that we must build, and we can only do so through the active and effective use of the ballot box.

And the trade union movement is essential to the black struggle because it is the only institution in the society capable of economically uplifting the masses of impoverished and exploited Negroes. Its legislative program for job creation, urban reconstruction, education, health, and tax reform is designed specifically to help the lower and lower-middle classes in which blacks are so disproportionately represented. And by its efforts to organize the unorganized -- whether they be farm workers in California, sanitation workers in Memphis, or hospital workers in New York and Charleston -- it is enabling hundreds of thousands of poor Americans to escape the lumpenproletariat and to achieve a measure of dignity and economic security. It is the union card, therefore, together with the ballot box, that must become part of the basic dynamism of the black struggle.

There are many young blacks today who would deny that the electoral process and the labor movement can play an effective role in the black movement. But they have no comprehensive strategy with which to replace the one I have just outlined, and without such a strategy their protest, though militant in rhetoric and intention, may be reactionary in its effect. For in the present political period, protest is a value only to the degree that it can creatively and non-violently call attention to social injustice and enhance the use of the ballot box and the organization of the unorganized.

To the degree that protest becomes violent, it will strengthen the rightist forces in the country and make impossible the further development toward political and economic equality.

While the objectives I have proposed can be achieved non-violently, let me be clear that their realization would amount to a revolution in this society, by which I mean a fundamental reorientation of our social and economic priorities And indeed, the problems of our cities cannot be solved by anything less than a revolution. But even if we were to achieve these objectives, I must caution that there would still be protest, for the revolution we are presently undergoing involves also the demand demand for dignity and the democratic participation in the politic al pro cess. There must, therefore, be visible representation of minority people in those bodies where decisions are made. And more importantly, these bodies must become responsive to the needs and aspirations of their constituencies. Until this final objectiv is achieved, we cannot in all honesty claim to have built a democracy in this country.

Boy Has Hair on Chest, Arms, And Legs---Face Is Baby-Smooth

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from "Hirsuite Hilda", the secretary who had to shave every day. It makes me sick that life is so unfair.

I am a 23-year-old boy and I have lots of hair on my chest and arms and legs, but my face is as smooth as a baby's backside. I shave twice a week, even though I don't need to. The doctor says there is nothing wrong with me -- that these things happen now and then, and nothing can be done about it.

When I go to a movie for adults only, I carry my I.D. card. I also wear a sport shirt and leave the collar open so the cashier can see the hair on my chest.

Is there anything I can do to get the hair on my face to grow? Thanks. -- Harry (Another embarrassment. This is my real name.)

Dear Harry: The doctor gave you the straight goods. Accept it. If it's any comfort to you, please know that millions of men consider shaving a nuisance and would like to trade your problem for theirs.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 17, married 15 months, and have a baby. My husband is 19. Bill has changed into a different person this past year. I can't believe it.

He is so jealous I feel like I'm in jail. If someone calls on the phone and it's a wrong number he says it was another guy. Last night he spent an hour looking for tire marks in the driveway. He worked late and was sure someone was here.

Tonight he went through my album and tore up all the pictures of my high school friends. I phoned Dad and asked him to come and get me and the baby. This marriage is lousy and I see no hope for the future. Please tell me where I can get a free lawyer. I want a divorce so I can start over. --- Messed Up Girl

Dear Girl: Start what over? Another mess? Here you are, 17 years of age, and already looking for a divorce. It won't solve your problem, Toots. It will only free you to make another lousy marriage.

You need time to grow up and so does that active volcano who calls himself a husband. Stay apart a few weeks and then get some counseling.

Dear Ann Landers: Several of us girls gave a lovely engagement shower for a co-worker. Ramona told us that her fiance's wife had agreed to a nice quiet divorce and the wedding would come off in the fall. The shower was held at my home and the gifts were beautiful.

Last week Ramona announced, with a good deal of embarassment, that the man's wife has a heart condition and he cannot leave her. The wedding is off. She didn't say one word about returning the gifts. Later I asked her what she intended to do with all those lovely presents. She replied, "I'll keep them. They will come in handy when I meet someone wonderful."

Former Reporter Now Nixon Staff Member

BALTIMORE (AP) - On a slow news day back in 1948, a city editor told a young reporter, "Go take a look at the waterfront and see what's going on."

Last Saturday, that reporter -- who apparently found out what was "going on" -- was named by President Nixon to the $40,000-a-year job as head of the federal Maritime Commission, subject to Senate approval.

Mrs. Helen Delich Bentley, veteran maritime editor of the Baltimore Sun, accepted the president's nod with the words, "I consider myself a real fighter on behalf of the American merchant marine.

"This industry is torn apart. I've tried very hard in the past to bring it together."

Should she be confirmed in the post, Mrs. Bentley would "pursue vigorously our goal of preserving and encouragaing a healthy economy of which the shipping industry is a vital segment."

A first - generation American of Yugoslavian descent, she was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1944 and joined the Sun after brief stints with the United Press in Fort Wayne, Ind., and on the Lewiston, Idaho, Trbiune.

Since then, she has been a prolific reporter, known to be tough yet fair.

Portageville Minister Announces Plans For New Church Building

PORTAGEVILLE -- The Rev. Jerry Haughton, of the Portageville Trinity Baptist Church announced today that plans are underway to construct a $40,000 sanctuary and education plant. The structure will be of an ultra-modern design and will be located on a 200 x 300 foot lot on the corner of McCrate Avenue and 11th Street.

Church services are presently being held in the Cotton Bowl Lanes building on Highway 61, where the members turned the former bowling alley into temporary classrooms and a church auditorium. The building is given rent free by the Daugherty brothers of Portageville.

Rev. Haughton came to Portageville in June of '68 as pastor of the First Baptist Church and remained in that position for six months. But due to fundamental differences in the methods of ministering, the church split, thus came about the constitution of the Trinity Baptist Church in January of '69 with 75 Charter members. In spite of the split, however, the Church is stil! affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention.

"When the split occurred," said Rev. Haughton, "families were divided, but our people were determined." "Every service is an emphasis on intensive Bible study," he continued, "the old type of hell fire and brimstone sermons with the ghost story illustrations is the type preaching that is a thing of the past."

Rev. Haughton says that his ministry is different and consists of "equipping believers to be ministers in the world." For this reason emphasis is given to Bible training.

"Most ministers are community chaplains," says Rev. Haughton, "but I regard myself as being placed in charge by God to only those members of the Trinity Baptist Church."

Rev. Haughton does not perform weddings for Christians and non-Christians, but married only couples if both are professing Christians. He also does not perform Funerals for non-Christians. He says that his responsibility to the non-Christian consists in nothing more than preaching the Gospel to him.

The Church emphasizes the fundamental doctrines of the faith, but will use any methods which are honorable to reach mankind.

Book discussion groups are offered for the young people of the Church instead of Sunday School and in place of Training Union, a "College of Christianity," has been organized with different courses being offered each quarter. Contemporary novels are read and discussed among the young people of the church and they also attend movies in groups which are considered philosophical (2001 Space Odessy and Rose Mary's Baby) after which they gather at one's house for discussion.

On August 20, a Christian hippie, once converted under Rev. Haughton, will be in Portageville to preach and sing folk gospel music. The event will take place on the parking lot of the present Church location.

Rev. Haughton graduated from Mississippi College in Jackson, Mississippi in 1965 and also graduated from the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary in 1968 with a Master of Theology Degree. He majored in Biblical languages (Hebrew and Greek) and uses these in his services instead of any translations.

Rev. Haughton is releasing a book to Zondervan Publishers this month, which is titled "God's Strategy For The Church". The book should be on the market next summer.

Rev. Haughton, 26, his wife JoAnn and 2 month old Brian live in the Parsonage on DeLisle Street.

Mrs. Nixon Describes Residence

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Pat Nixon showed off the redecorated Spanish-style oceanfront Western White House and told how she tried to keep expenses down and make the place j"light and airy."

"I try not to be extravagant," the President's wife said Thursday as she took reporters on a tour of the $340,000, 14-room, five-bath Nixon home set amid cyprus, palm and eucalyptus trees.

She said she tried to make use of French provincial furniture the Nixons had in their New York apartment, painting things "to make them fresh and new."

From the six-hole golf course and blue-tiled, scallop-edged swimming pool to the President's red-and-white bedroom with a Vietnam painting over the bed, Mrs. Nixon said, "I love it."

With a minimum of time on the project—"We did it all in one day"—Mrs. Nixon put to work Los Angeles interior decorators Cannel and Chaffin to create a predominately yellowand-white color scheme with accents of royal blue.

The major improvement, Mrs. Nixon said, was making the place "light and airy" by painting the heavy wooden ceiling beams white, replacing venetian blinds with white shutters and cutting back shrubbery to enhance the Pacific ocean view.

The yellow living room looks out on yellow marigolds in the garden and has three high arched windows for a view of the sea.

Every room has a white telephone and Nixon's has red ones, too.

A closet in a downstairs hallway houses the Nixon' music system. Mrs. Nixon tried to put on a record to demonstrate, but confessed, "I haven't been here long enough to learn how to use the machine."

There have been reports that neighbors in the Cyprus Shores community are upset over the security restrictions the Nixons have imposed on them. But Mrs. Nixon said all the neighbors have written her nice notes inviting her to tea. And she plans to have them in for a visit.

The President's study is the only second-floor room in the sprawling white stucco, redtiled house. The house surrounds a courtyard with a fountain.

In their redecorating, the Nixons even fitted the Secret Service into the Spanish-styled decor. The agents occupy matching white stucco, red-tile roofed gazebos with tinted glass windows.

The Gospel Visitor

By: REEDUS M. BAUGHER

No one truly comes to know and appreciate the word of God, apart from personal study. (2 Tim. 2:15) Therefore, we as teachers and preachers of the gospel, must use a reasonable portion of our time to incite this study. Man is a rational being, and thus, is responsible to think and act. The gospel is a message which appeals to man's intelligence. It is not "better felt than told;" neither void of emotion. Rather it gives real meaning to our feelings, is the reason for our hopes, and the rock on which we stand. (1 Pet. 3:15; Luke 6:46-48) Paul said, "I know whom I have believed . . ." (2 Tim. 1:12) Our hope and destiny rest not on many, but on God through His word. (1 Cor. 4:6; 2 Cor. 3:4-5; 1 Thess. 2:13) Yet we are responsible beings, we must understand the will of the Lord, (Eph. 5:17) and respond in accord with that will. (Acts 2:40) We must think and act!!

For the past three weeks we have sought to give direction to the earnest.; through a study of actual accounts of the lost being saved, recorded by Luke in the book of acts. Unless you personally read and studied what transpired, you received very little from these lessons. We are not trying to deceive, we want our faith to rest upon God's world. Will you reason together with us?

In the book, commonly called, "The acts of the apostles." Is recorded nine case histories of conversions and two cases of non-conversions. In these we learn how and why people are saved and why they are not. This book is neither the acts of all the apostles nor all the acts of any of the apostles, but is primarily the work of Peter (Chapters 1-12) and Paul (Chapters 13-28) as they preached to the Jews and then the Gentiles. In this book is also, a history of the early church. We will list the conversions for your personal study.

1. Acts 2:22-41 -- Jews of every nation, -- Heard, believed, repented, baptized. 2. Acts 8:5-17 -- Samaritans -- Heard, believed, were baptized. 3. Acts 8:26-39 -- Man of Ethiopia -- Heard, believed, confessed, baptized. 4. Acts 22:3-16 -- Saul of Tarsus -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 5. Acts 10:33-48 -- Cornelius -- Heard, believed, repented, was baptized. 6. Acts 16:13-15 -- Lydia -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 7. Acts 16:25-34 -- Jailor of Philippi -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 8. Acts 18:8 -- The Corinthians -- Heard, believed, was baptized. 9. Acts 19:1-20 -- The Ephesians -- Heard, Believed, were baptized.

New SHS Grid Coach Optimistic

Bill Priday will take over the position of head football coach at Sikeston High School, replacing William R. Sapp, and will meet the prospects for the 1969 squad today as the first practice session gets underway.

Mr. Priday graduated from Fredricktown high school and went on to attend college at Cape Girardeau where he played football for four years at guard and line-backer positions.

Bill was elected co-captain of the college squad his senior year along with being selected as a member of the first team all-conference squad as a guard.

Bill began his teaching and coaching career at Festus where he stayed on for five years. He then moved to Fredricktown where he was head football coach for three years.

He was also head coach for the next three years at Festus. Teams he coached at Festus and Fredricktown were members of the Mineral Area Conference.

This conference usually had about nine members squads and he led his team to second place two years.

Along with coaching football, Bill has also taught History, Social Studies, and Physical Education.

He has been a track coach prior to coming to Sikeston. His duties here are scheduled to be coaching football and instructing physical education classes.

Assisting Bill in coaching this season will be Norman Lambert, Muarry Sullivan, Jim Graham, George Hale, and Johnny Heacox.

The Bulldog gridmen held its first practice session today. According to Priday, the first two weeks of practice will be spend conditioning and drilling.

"I have not had a real chance to see the team as of yet, however, it will be a small team and I don't know about the speed", Priday commented about this year squad.

Priday went on to say that: "I coach with pretty basic methods, but will probably initiate a multiple offense and defense."

He also stated that he doesn't know much about the other teams in this area, but from what he has read, he expects Cape and Poplar Bluff to be respectable with several of last years players returning.

In concluding, Priday said: "I am looking forward to football very hap[illegible] the [illegible] and s[illegible]

O. J. Makes Debut

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Will O. J. Simpson be a $300,000 flop in his pro football debut with the Buffalo Bills against the Detroit Lions at Tiger Stadium tonight?

The debut of the most prized rookie since Joe Namath in the play-for-pay gridiron sport headlines a two-game schedule that kicks off another busy weekend of 12 exhibitions.

The Baltimore Colts play the Houston Oilers in the Astrodome in tonight's other game. Seven games are scheduled for Saturday night and three more Sunday afternoon.

O. J. vaunted All-American running back and the Heisman Trophy winner for Southern California, signed with the Bills only last weekend and hence may not play the entire game against the Lions.

The performance of the famed 6-foot-1, 207-pounder from San Francisco will be watched closely. There have been cases of college stars who did not make it with the pros, notably John Huarte, All-American quarterback from Notre Dame who also won the Heisman Trophy.

The Bills go against the Lions fresh from an upset 21-17 victory over the Washington Redskins last week, paced by the passing of Tom Flores and the running of Max Anderson. the Lions hope to rebound after a 38-13 drubbing from the Kansas City Chiefs.

Johnny Unitas, apparently recovered from his ailing throwing arm, will lead the Colts against the Oilers in the Astrodome. The veteran quarterback completed 12 of 19 passes for 147 yards and one TD in pacing the unbeaten Colts to a 34-30 victory over the Oakland Raiders last week.

The Oilers, who beat Buffalo 24-7 on Aug. 2, were idle last week and are ready with quarterback Pete Beathard reported "100 per cent improved" by Coach Wally Lemm.

The Chicago Bears and Green Bay Packers renew their rivalry Saturday night at Milwaukee in a game that will be nationally televised by CBS.

Cleveland is at Los Angeles, New Orleans is at Denver, Philadelphia is at Miami, Oakland is at San Diego help round out the Saturday night schedule that also lists Pittsburgh vs. St. Louis at Norfolk, Va. and Cincinnati vs. Kansas City at Jackson, Miss.

It is the first meeting between the New York City rivals and the AFL Jets are reported determined to down the NFL Giants for the so-called NYC championship.

Atlanta is at Boston and Dallas at San Francisco in Sunday's other games.

Hockersmith Stars As Eagles Take Over First

EAST PRAIRIE -- The Eagles took sole possession of first place in the Little League baseball standings after last night's 9-0 victory over the Dodgers, who were tied for the leadership.

It was the efforts of Spud Hockersmith that lifted the Eagles into first as he pitched a no-hitter, allowing only one base runner, that coming on an infield error in the sixth and blasting two home runs and a double.

In the opener, the Braves defeated the Mets 10-4 with Vernon Scott hurling a three hitter and Jim Hockersmith and Berry Morgan providing the hitting with two singles.

Bids Asked on I-55 Fruitland To Perry County Segment

JEFFERSON CITY--Right of way has been obtained, plans are completed and on Aug. 29 the state highway commission will take bids for the remaining 13-1 miles of Interstate Highway 55 in Cape Girardeau county from its present Fruitland terminus to the Perry County line.

Announcement of the status of the route was made by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

In addition to this section of I-55, the State Highway Department also announced that the route of I-55 in Ste. Genevieve County has been divided into five segments and bids on these will be received in September and November.

At the Sikeston district 10 office of the highway department, Wm. R. Yarnell, engineer in the surveys and plans division, said if the bids are favorable for the Cape County segment of I-55, construction will begin in the current fiscal year.

He explained the contract will extend only to the south bank of Apple Creek on the north. The bridging of the creek will be a part of the next contract to be awarded, a segment 11.1 miles long in Perry County extending to a point west of Perryville.

There will be 14 bridge structures between Fruitland and Apple Creek, however. These have been designed by the department's bridge engineers in Jefferson City. Highway design, however, has been done by the engineers at the Sikeston office.

The announcement that right of way had been obtained and plans completed indicates the route has been expedited by the department to complete it as soon as possible. In May, 10 per cent of plans remained uncompleted and 13 per cent of right of way had not been obtained.

Construction is now underway on I-55 south of Portageville and a gap remains from there to a point south of Hayti. Construction is underway in the Festus area on the link reaching southward toward Fruitland. Contracts on 9.1 miles south from Festus were awarded in February.

Russell Sublette, engineer in the survey and plans division of the district highway office in Kirkwood, said the Ste. Genevieve portion of I-55 was divided into five sections to bring bidding into the range of smaller contractors.

Three of the five portions are south of State Route 0 in the county and it is expected bids wil be received for these in September. The remaining two sections north of Route O will be up for bids in November.

Condemnation proceedings are now underway for the three protions south of Route O. Commissioners have been appointed and are to review the land on Aug. 18. Condemnation proceedings have been filed on a tract north of Route O, the department reported, but commissioners have not yet been appointed.

The five sections in Ste. Genevieve County total 24.9 miles of construction. Each of the five is of approximately the same length.

Tax Reform, Yes, but Not At Expense of Churches

By DAVID POLING

An essential and vital discussion being held by the Senate Finance Committee is in the area of tax reform. Almost every special consideration that has been part of the tax regulations of our government is under scrutiny. The loopholes are not only being closed but sealed as well.

But a closer look at the reform proposals of the Long committee suggests a paralyzing crunch on a vast number of worth-while, even necessary, institutions of our national life.

A bill being considered would virtually abolish life income contracts and charitable remainder trusts for colleges, hospitals, churches and other nonprofit organizations. In simple language, it means that a person would no longer have a tax incentive and a tax advantage to give securities, property or real estate in return for a life income contract. The individual now enjoys the option of supporting the charity or church or college of his choice through the gift of property or securities that have appreciated over the years. The new provision would place a tax on the market value of a farm or home or stock. The donor would be socked with a whopping tax on the capital gain and the institution discovers that expected sources of income and donations have vanished.

While it is true that most of our charitable causes have attracted and cultivated a broad following, the largest chunk of money comes from a rather small minority. Take for an example, that church-related college in a neighboring community. You don't have to be a math major to realize that the tuition and fees charged each student are not enough to carry the costs of operating the school. I doubt if the income from these charges could equal even half the operating expenses. The rest of the money comes from alumni, friends, a few wealthy "angels" and perhaps $25,000 from a national mission board or agency. And when you look closely at these outside sources, you will find that they represent major capital gifts or donations for operating expenses that are the result of appreciated securities or real property.

This should be no surprise and ought to be praised as one of the brightest things ever established by the Congress. It encourages the flow of gifts to the private sector and strengthens our national life through the expansion of nongovernmental services. A tremendous amount of health, education and welfare pour out of our private, sectarian centers. To tamper or hinder or shut down these fountains of vitality and inspiration would be a sickening result of tax reform gone mad.

Yes, we must have tax reform. We must experience it now, in these days of inflation, new services and broader coverage. But the search for new income must not be pursued at the expense of those institutions that provide so much flavor and quality to our national life. And it doesn't take a math professor to tell you that this country has lots of tax money, lots of billions upon billions that have been squandered, slopped and sunk into a Vietnam catastrophe. That doesn't come under tax reform but it is the biggest loophole of all.

What We Think About It

By Lt. Colonel Norman E. May
of Warwick, Bermuda

"I think I know what is bothering the students. I think that what we are up against is a generation that is by no means sure that it has a future.

"I am growing old, and my future, so to speak, is already behind me. But there are those students of mine, who are in mind, always; and there are my children, the youngest of them now seven and nine, whose future is infinitely more precious to me than my own. So it isn't just their generation; it's mine, too. We're all in it together.

"Are we to have a chance to live? We don't ask for prosperity, or security. Only for a reasonable chance to live, to work out our destiny in peace and decency. Not to go down in history as the apocalyptic generation.

"And it isn't only nuclear war. Another overwhelming threat is in the population explosion. That has not yet even begun to come under control. There is every indication that the world population will double before the year 2000, and there is a widespread expectation of famine on any unprecedented scale in many parts of the world. The experts tend to differ only in their estimates of when those famines will begin. Some think by 1980; others think they can be saved off until 1990; very few expect that they will not occur by the year 2000.

"That is the problem. Unless we can be surer than we now are that this generation has a future, nothing else matters. It's not good enough to give it tender, loving care, to supply it with breakfast foods, to buy it, expensive educations. Those things don't mean anything unless this generation has a future. And we're not sure that it does.

"I don't think that there are problems of youth, or student problems. All the real problems I know about are grown-up problems.

"Perhaps you will think me altogether absurd, or 'academic,' or hopelessly innocent – that is, until you think of the alternatives–if I say, as I do to you now: We have to get rid of those nuclear weapons. There is nothing worth having that can be obtained by nuclear war – nothing material or ideological – no tradition that it can defend. It is utterly self-defeating. Those atomic bombs represent an unusable weapon. The only use for an atomic bomb is to keep somebody else from using one. It can give us no protection – only the doubtful satisfaction of retaliation. Nuclear weapons offer us nothing but a balance of terror, and a balance of teror is still terror.

Venereal disease continued to be a problem in 1968. There was a slight increase in the incidence of both syphilis and gonorrhea. Much of it in teenagers.

So far, syphilis could be successfully treated by penicillin, but all known contacts of a diagnosed infectious case had to be found, examined and brought to treatment if infected. An increasing number of people have become allergic to pencillin, and this posed a problem. Other drugs, fortunately, will cure the disease.

Gonorrhea became much more of a problem. Many of the patients were young; one was only 12 years old. The strain of the disease found most often in this area was no longer cured by penicillin. It was, moreover, becoming resistant to other forms of treatment.

Because of the difficulties we were having with V.D., education of teenagers became important. A film was first shown to parents to enlist their approval of a program to inform students of the dangers of these diseases. For the first time, seventh and eighth graders were included. A few of the younger children were confused, but most of them understand. The question-answer period after the talk and film brought some unbelievable querries, all of which were answered honestly. We may not have changed the behavior patterns, but if not, we will have better informed sinners.

Two Juveniles Charged With Auto Thefts

Sikeston police, early today, apprehended two local juveniles in connection with the theft of two cars and a burglary Thursday.

U.D. Wethington, 117 Reuben St., reported his station wagon was stolen from the Pure Oil truck stop, south of Sikeston about 3 a.m.

About two hours later the car and two juveniles were spotted on the south edge of Sikeston.

When the police stopped them, they were driving another car reported stolen in Charleston. Both stolen automobiles were recovered.

It is also believed two juveniles burglarized Proffer's Grocery at Matthews Thursday.

Store manager Joe Settles said 40 to 50 cartons of cigarettes and other items were taken.

Tax Increase Almost Ready for Senate Poll

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) -- Only technical changes remained today before a proposed income tax increase bill is submitted to Missouri's 34 senators for a poll of their sentiments.

If 18 of them approve, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes plans to call a special legislative session about Sept. 8, to provide the revenue to solve a fiscal crisis expected in the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham D-Columbia, Senate majority leader, said after a conference of House and Senate leaders with tax experts Thursday he thought some progress had been made in clarifying the state's need for more revenue.

He helped defeat a proposed individual income tax increase in the regular session along with Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, the President Pro Tem. Vanlandingham said he still doesn't like the idea but now is convinced more revenue is needed.

Blackwell had scheduled a news conference to express his continued opposition to the plan but failed to show up.

Newsmen had hoped to quiz him about his tangled marital situation but he did not appear. He has made no comment on that subject since his marriage in Las Vegas, Nev., to his 26 year-old secretary, Carolyn Sue Ravenscraft.

In many ways Thursday's discussion sounded like a rerun of the regular legislative session last spring when disputed revenue figures flew around.

Sen. Richard M. Webster, R Carthage, one of the opponents of a personal income tax increase, said he is still against it. He said he came to Jefferson City expecting to discuss a compromise but found instead the same bill that was defeated is still being proposed.

Both he and Sen. Edward T. Linehan, D-St. Louis, another opponent, continued to question Revenue Department figures and projections.

As drafted, the bill would raise individual and corporate income taxes by about $65 million for one full year's collections. Individual rates would go from a top of 4 per cent to 6 per cent for the highest income brackets and the corporate maximum from 2 to 5 per cent.

Correction

In Friday's Standard a story about the City water system reported that an open house at the Waterworks building would be held Saturday. Construction is underway at the plant and an open house will be announced for a later date, Manager Dick Inman said today. The newspaper was misinformed about an open house scheduled for Saturday.

Minor Accidents Can Be Costly

POPLAR BLUFF -- Capt. E. F. Dampf, commander of troop E of the state patrol reported that minor accidents can be costly.

There were 355 accidents in the area in July with 13 killed and 197 injured, and property damage amounging to $268,650.

"Small things often add up to safe driving," Dampf said, "and if done poorly or not done add up to accidents.

He gives seven suggestions for good driving: When making left turn on four line highway, turn into lane closest to center line; use stop lights by tapping brakes to slow at stop signal; turn on turn signal blinker and tapp your brakes; yellow lines cost big money, but are worthless if you cross them; make habit of reading road signs; in passing observe five things, have clear distance ahead, sound horn before you start, turn on left signal light, go left of vehicle you pass; make right turn signal before coming back into the lane.

Area accident report for first seven months, number of accidents, injuries, fatal accidents, and property damage:

Scott county -- 168, 75, and $162,545; Dunklin -- 166, 78, 5 and $118,035.; Mississippi -- 113, 52, 7 and $117,430½; New Madrid -- 176, 107, 6 and $173,995; Pemiscot -- 186, 103, 13 and $139,640; Stoddard -- 149, 91, 7 and $124,845.

therefore are proposing amendments which would increase farm income, Secretary Hardin and the Bureau of the Budget are caught in a budget squeeze, and therefore will propose amendments designed to reduce government costs.

"The great need is for policies and programs which will increase farm income without increasing government costs, for improvements which will reduce costs without reducing farm income.

"In recent years, proposals to limit payments to a maximum of 5, 10, 20 or 25 thousand dollars to an individual producer have received increasing approval in the House of Representatives. Right now, as your outstanding Congressman Bill Burlison well knows, the agricultural appropriation bill passed by the House on May 27 and by the Senate on July 27 has not yet gone to conference because of the demand in the House for payment limitations.

"Secretary Hardin and others who have studied these proposals conclude that the supply adjustment goals of the annual programs could be achieved even though large farm program payments were limited, but they also warn these limitations could result in increased surpluses; and therefore increased government storage costs.

"Any payment limitation would affect more cotton growers than wheat or feed grain producers; but out of 449,376 cotton growers who received payments in 1968, only some 5,000 would be affected by the $20,000 limitation voted by the House this year.

"If a payment limitation were at the lowest level ever proposed, only 8 percent of the cotton producers, namely 34,000, would be affected; and this would probably result in record production and record surpluses of cotton in storage.

"Note also that a $5,000 payment limitation would affect only 3 percent of the wheat producers and but 2 percent of the feed grain producers.

"As you all know, I do not believe in the principle of limiting payments to individual farm operators, who help all of agriculture by limiting their production. We do not put a ceiling on the benefits to a great corporation like General Motors from the standpoint of protection through tariffs, or to the big oil companies from oil import quotas. Nor to the large magazines from mail subsidies.

"Despite problems of payments limitation and its obvious unfairness, some of the most knowledgeable of our farm leaders believe a continuation of existing programs, even though subjected to a payment limitation, would be far better than no program at all. This may be a choice which will have to be made at some time in the future.

"According to our best estimates, if the Congress is unable to agree on an extension of current commodity programs, farm income will drop by approximately 5 billion dollars--3.5 billion dollars in payments along with up to 1.5 billion dollars in lower farm income due to overproduction and lower prices.

"We have many other domestic economic problems and situations abroad which are both costly and tragic.

"So let us all work together to develop the best possible farm programs; for cotton, for food and feed grains, for the wise utilization of our abundance in feeding and clothing the hungry and naked. In that way we will have more prosperous agriculture, and a more secure America, and a better world in which to live."

Jack Tipton, Caruthersville, M.C.P.A. chairman, presided.

Symington and his aide, Stanley Fike, were flown to Sikeston this morning by Ray Clinton.

Following a luncheon, directors of the association met to set the date for the 21st annual Missouri Cotton Producers association meeting in Sikeston in April.

Eagleton, who is taking advantage of a Congressional recess to make a three-day tour of Southeast Missouri was present at a non luncheon where Symington was the principal speaker.

Eagleton told a dinner audience in Kennett Thursday that Congress's new hard look at money quests from the Pentagon has been overshadowed by debate over the controversial Safeguard Antiballistic Missile system.

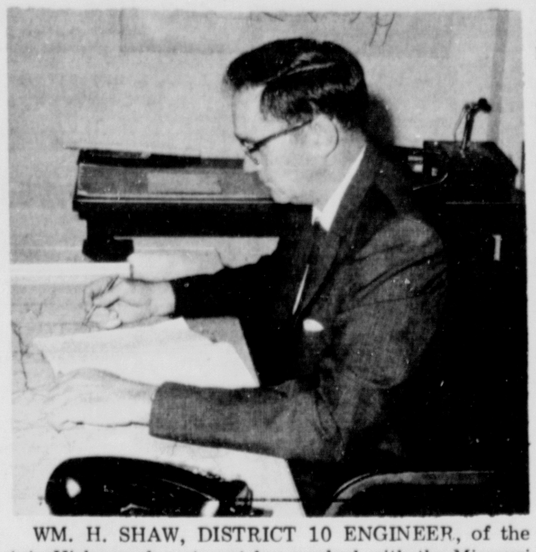
District 10 Highway Unit Headquartered in Sikeston

Organized Leader Is Bill Shaw



WM. H. SHAW, DISTRICT 10 ENGINEER, of the state Highway department has worked with the Missouri State Highway Dept. for 20 years.

His office isn't elaborate or particularly private. The floor is tile and the walls are painted pale green, just like the remainder of the office building at the District 10 Highway Dept.

Wm. H. Shaw's office is separated from the various secretaries and clerical workers on the highway department's main floor, by a wooden partition.

Bill Shaw doesn't need an elaborate, secluded office in order to supervise a business.

His key to success is organization.

In three glass bookshelves to his left, Shaw keeps numerous volumes of large books.

The books are so large and the book shelves are so clean nd neat, one might guess the books are there just for show, and that Shaw has no idea as to their contents.

That's wrong. When a question arises, particularly pertaining to statistics or past activities, which Shaw cannot answer, he immediately chooses the coorect book from the shelves to supply the answer.

If a book won't do it, a telephone is just an arm's reach away. The district engineer uses the phone frequently to call various department heads or secretaries who supply him with information he doesn't have at hand.

Bill Shaw doesn't assume and he doesn't provide approximations when the facts are needed.

But Shaw isn't all business. His three children keep him and his wife, Marta, busy.

Paula, 20, a junior at the University of Missouri, Columbia, is the movie critic of the family. She recommends movies for my wife and I to see all the time, Shaw said, but so far, I haven't liked her taste.

Doug, 17, and Mark, 14, are both in Senior High School and keep their Dad busy with school activities.

Shaw took a week away from the office this summer to serve as a counselor at Boy Scout Camp Lewallen.

He has been district engineer at the Sikeston office since 1967. Before coming here, he worked at the highway department in Jefferson City for six and one half years.

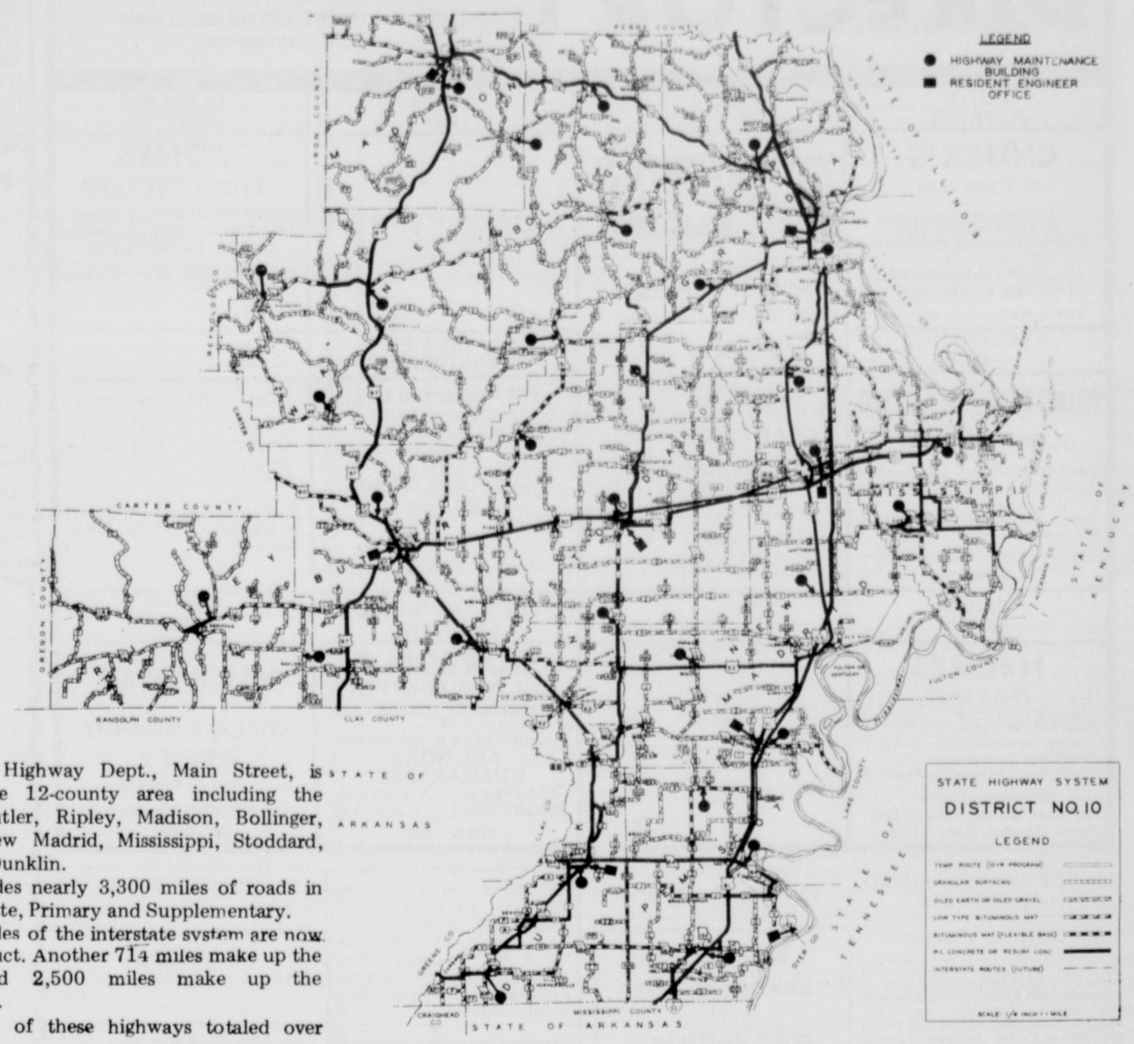
While there, he served as field liaison engineer, division of traffic and maintenance and as utilities engineer of surveys and plans.

Prior to living in Jefferson City, the Shaws lived in Sikeston. Then, Shaw served as resident engineer designer.

A native of Illmo, Shaw attended Southeast Missouri State College and the University of Missouri, Rolla, as a civil engineering major.

He has been with the Missouri State Highway Dept. for 20 years.

The family attends the First United Methodist Church. Shaw is a member of the Missouri Society of Professional Engineers and he is a registered engineer and land surveyor.



The District 10 Highway Dept., Main Street, is headquarters for the 12-county area including the counties, Wayne, Butler, Ripley, Madison, Bollinger, Pemiscott, Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Cape Girardeau, and Dunklin.

The district includes nearly 3,300 miles of roads in three systems, Interstate, Primary and Supplementary.

More than 100 miles of the interstate system are now completed in the district. Another 714 miles make up the primary system and 2,500 miles make up the supplementary system.

Construction cost of these highways totaled over $161,700,000.

In the District 10 area, there is a maintenance building for every 100 miles of road. Each building has six to 15 employes.

For every three to four buildings, there is an area supervisor. In District 10, there are ten area supervisors. The entire district has two maintenance supervisors and one maintenance and traffic engineer.

District 10 has eight resident engineer offices throughout the area. Registered engineers or civil engineer graduates supervise these offices.

All offices including maintenance, construction, legal, equipment, administration, materials, right-of-way and surveys and plans, are headquartered in Sikeston.

Fifteen field mechanics travel throughout the area to keep equipment in shape at the resident engineer offices and the maintenance buildings.

FLASHING LIGHT SIGNALS, estimated to cost $12,000, were installed at the railroad crossing on Salcedo Road this summer. For the Missouri Public Service Commission to order such a light, one or more conditions must exist. Train speeds should exceed 60 miles per hour; railroad and highway traffic should exceed 1,200 vehicles per day; at least one train should pass through per day or restricted visibility should exist. The highway department paid 90 per cent of the cost and the railroad paid 10 per cent.

Traffic Safety Program Planned

This summer, the highway department began compiling data for a safety modification program which will get into full swing on Interstates 55 and 57 in January.

The program will cause workmen to change guard rails, signs and medium obstructions so the devices will comply with traffic rules which recently have gone into effect.

Guard rails will be modified so the end of the rails will curve down and fasten to the ground.

The rails, now, are curved out toward the highway and are easily sent through automobiles during accidents.

The downward curved rails will be less likely to cut through automobiles in accidents.

Drainage devices now used will be removed and flush grates will be installed.

Also, highway signs will be moved further from the road, to assure greater safety.

Some guard rails, which were destroyed in traffic accidents, have been replaced according to the change called for by the safety modification program. The new rails may be seen on I-55 between Cape Girardeau and Sikeston.

Highway Department Has Annual Payroll Over Three Million

Highway Department Has Annual Payroll Over Three Million At the District 10 Highway Dept., 566 full-time employes and 100 to 125 part-time employes make up an annual payroll of approximately $3,800,000. About $1,100,00 of this amount is distributed in he Sikeston area.

The employes work in one of several departments including administration, construction, legal, equipment, maintenance, materials, right-of-way and surveys and plans.

These departments are responsible for the design and construction of the highways, the acquistion of the rights-of-way and the maintenance of highways after completion.

The maintenance department spends about 1.25 million dollars annually on routine operations. About $750,000 of this amount is spent in leveling or rebuilding the surface of many of roads.

This type of work consists of placing a road mix oil surface on the roadway with maintenance equipment. The work is not included with regular construction projects.

Other routine maintenance operations are mowing rights-of-way, replacing damaged signs, guard rails and bridge railings.

The construction department is currently supervising projects costing more than $20,000,000. Construction work is supervised by eight resident engineers who are located throughout the District 10 area.

The most complicated project underway now, and one which won't be completed for several years, is the bridge across the Mississippi River at Caruthersville.

The materials department works in conjunction with the construction department. Their duty is to inspect all material used in the construction of the highways.

The right-of-way department appraises and negotiates property required for incorporation into highways.

The department also provides relocation assistance to persons whose homes are acquired for highway purposes.

The surveys and plans department surveys land and prepares detailed design plans for the construction of roads.

Surveys and plans works on numerous projects at the same time because it takes five years to complete preliminary stages of construction projects.

Currently, surveys and plans is working on various projects which will cost more than $48,666,000.

Equipment personnel keep all vehicles belonging to the highway department in top operating condition.

Administration personnel process all invoices, issue over-dimension permits and handle the accounting duties.

Several Projects Are Completed During Summer

Numerous plans and projects have progressed or been completed this summer in the District 10 Highway Dept. area.

INTERSTATE 55

Contracts have been awarded for the installment of basic lighting on the road and ramps on the Interstate 55 interchanges at Miner and Scott City. Work should begin on these projects in the next couple of weeks.

Work is nearing completion on I-55 in Pemiscot County from a south of Portageville to north of Hayti. Grading, paving and bridge work are being done.

Rest area beautification on I-55 in New Madrid and Pemiscot Counties near Marston and Steele is completed. Shrubs and trees were planted, and dead plants were replaced.

Improvements on I-55 in Cape Girardeau and Scott Counties from Scott City to route 74 is complete. Bridge approach slabs were replaced, some guard rails were changed and some resurfacing was done.

Bids will open Aug. 29 for the letting of I-55 from Fruitland to the Perry County line. Construction of this 13½ mile stretch of road will include the construction dual rest areas.

IN AND NEAR SIKESTON

On route 61, north of Sikeston, at Tanner Road, the pavement was raised as much as 10 inches in some spots, to minimize the possibility of kwater crossing the pavement during heavy rain.

Design work for the construction of a four-lane highway along Main Street from the North Y to the Holiday Inn is has progressed sufficiently enough to permit a public hearing in the near future. Wm. H. Shaw, district engineer, said he hopes for a 1971 letting date for the project.

Bids for the complete reconstruction of route Y, from North Kingshighway to Salcedo will be advertised soon. This project was advertised once this summer, but the only bid received was excessive. A 22-foot roadway will be built here and six-foot shoulders will be added.

COUNTY ROADS

Construction is 40 per cent complete on Butler County route 67 from Poplar Bluff north to the junction of route 60. A four-lane highway is being built. there.

Cape Girardeau route K from I-55 to route 61 is complete. The road is a four-lane facility.

Sixty per cent of the work is completed on New Madrid County route WW from New Madrid east to the River levee. A new road and two bridges are being constructed there.

Seventy per cent of the work is complete on Scott County route M from Scott City to Chaffee. Reconstruction and some relocation is being done.

Work on the reconstruction of Stoddard County route 25 through 25 is 95 per cent complete.

MAINTENANCE

Besides mowing rights-of-way, picking up litter and maintaining the planting of shrubs and flowers, maintenance crews have 70 per cent of the work on a 630-mile leveling course programs which improves the surface of low-type bituminous roads.

OTHER WORK

Painting of the Mississippi River Bridge in Cape Girardeau is progressing slowly, but it will be completed this year.

Resurfacing and shoulder work is complete on route 61 through Perry County. This roadway is in the District 6 area, but a personnel shortage there, caused District 10 to work the project.

COLOSSAL KITCHEN

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Coliseum's banquet and dining facility — the largest in Manhattan — utilizes a recently expanded kitchen that can serve 5,000 people at one sitting. At the center of the all-gas-fueled kitchen that occupies a block and a half of space is a giant precision oven weighing more than nine tons.

The rotary oven can prepare thousands of pounds of meat or poultry at a time, and it is programmed so that every portion receives equal degrees of heat.

Civil Engineers Are Department's First Preference

Students often have a difficult time finding summer employment because most employers aren't looking for three-month employes. When students do find summer jobs, the pay is often low.

An exception to this rule of employment is the District 10 Highway Dept. Three-month employes are welcome there, and they are welcomed with a salary which runs over $2 an hour.

"Most of our road work is done in the summer, and we always need plenty of extra workers," Wm. H. Shaw, district engineer said.

This summer the highway department hired 112 students out of 300 who applied.

The hiring is not done at random, however.

First preference is given to students majoring in civil engineering and who have already taken some civil engineering courses.

Second preference is given to students majoring in some form of engineering other than civil and who have already taken some courses in their major field.

Third preference goes to non-engineering students enrolled in a scientific curriculum such as math or physics.

Final preferences is for high school graduates who plan to enter college as an engineering student or as a student in a related scientific field.

Mississippi River Bridge Construction Has Begun

Work began this summer on a long-range project--the construction of a Mississippi River Bridge on Interstate-55 from south of Caruthersville to Dyersburg, Tenn.

The first contract was let to Massman Construction Co., Kansas City. The company is building main bridge piers and sub-structures for steel approach slabs.

Presently, the contractors are moving equipment and materials into the construction site. Sand-island construction for the first bridge pier will begin in a few weeks.

This first contract cost $8 million. At least two more contracts will be let before the bridge, is completed.

The project, which will take four years to complete, will be financed by Missouri and Tennessee. Each state will pay the cost for construction in each respective state.

Massman Construction Company is also building a Mississippi river bridge in Memphis.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Some Helpful Hints For World Travelers

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I am answering the "Older Couple" who are planning a European trip in the late summer. I would suggest taking an unlined knit suit with a jacket loose enough that a sweater could be worn under it if necessary. A cotton suit or jacket dress of a seersuckerlike material would be ideal. Absolutely essential, I think, are two pairs of comfortable walking shoes. I like to have one with wedge heels and nonslip soles and another pair of oxfords. Other essentials are raincoats, one the all-weather type and the other an inexpensive, thin plastic one that can be folded and carried in one's purse to be ready for sudden showers.

Sacrifice dressy extras if necessary. There are few places one will not feel well-dressed for dinner in a sleeveless or short-sleeved dress that may have its own jacket or a sweater to be put around the shoulders AND a pair of low-heeled pumps for an after-dinner stroll. Another extra I enjoy is a silk bag (pack costume jewelry in it) that is deep enough for your passport unless you are using a joint one with your husband. You will get tired of carrying your big travel pocketbook all the time.

Unless you are sure your husband will not get bored shopping and that there is no chance of missing connections, it is a good idea to have your own passport and some traveler's checks with you at all times for an emergency. This would not be so likely to happen on a conducted tour. All the above should be qualified by remembering that you can always run into "unusual" weather anywhere. Have a fine journey.—ADDELI.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am desperate and need help. The chrome on my dishwasher is being ruined by hot water splashing on it from the sink. It has to stand sideways against the sink as the hose is on the front. I have tried covering it with a towel, I wipe it dry after each use but all the spots will not come off. I have tried many cleansers, including vinegar, but nothing works. Our water is very hard, which is no help.—MRS. D. B.

DEAR POLLY—I work in a hospital and have to keep a pen in my uniform pocket. To help keep the pocket and uniform free from ink stains I keep a long, narrow eyeglass case in my pocket and slip the pen into this case.—ELIZABETH

DEAR POLLY—When I mow the grass I attach an empty clothespin bag to the mower and when I come to a rock or a piece of paper I just throw them into this bag.—DORICE

If You Were the Judge

School Can Banish Boy from Team

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Seventeen-year-old Chuck was the All-American super-star of his high school. He had it all–brains and athletic ability. But a little blonde co-ed in his English class twittered her eye lashes at him and his troubles began.

Chuck fell in love with the chick and, with parental consent, they were married. The next thing he knew, however, he was tossed off the school football team which was worse than telling him he couldn't eat any more banana splits. It seemed that there was a school rule prohibiting married students from engaging in extra-curricularactivities.

"That rule wasn't meant for someone like me," protested Chuck. "Considering my marks and my athletic accomplishments, to keep me off the football team would be to make a bad example of a good example."

"There are no exceptions to the rule," was the answer. "High school students who get married have a bad effect upon other students. The less they have to do with each other the better."

Determined to get back on the football team, Chuck made his demand for reinstatement in court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you direct that Chuck be allowed to continue to carry this school baners down the gridiron?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! He held that a court cannot interfere with the rules of a school board unless the rules are arbitrary and unreasonable. In this case, concluded the judge, the rule was reasonable since it discouraged marriage in high school which breeds improper conduct between unmarried students. What's more, it causes other students to get married and then drop out of school when they find they cannot handle their scholastic as well as domestic difficulties.

(Based upon a 1967 Iowa Supreme Court Decision)

The Prayer from The Upper Room

Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith. (Hebrews 12:1-2)

PRAYER: Gracious heavenly Father, give me strength for drooping arms, support for shaking knees, and courage for my fainting heart. So may I continue to be about the work in Thy kingdom. Amen.

The Torah is the Hebrew name for the first five books of the Bible — the books which Christians sometimes call the Pentateuch.

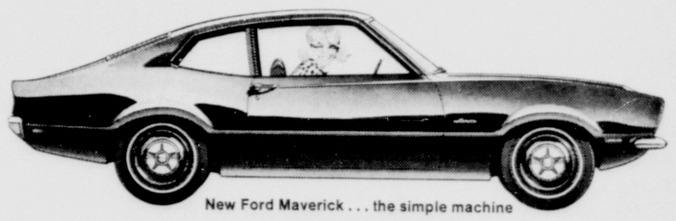
reasons why Maverick is the fastest-selling new car in automotive history!

Our little car is making a big hit. In its first 100 days Maverick has outsold every new car ever introduced. And every day more and more smart drivers are discovering the fun of owning the simple machine. Take a few minutes to find out why Maverick's so popular. Then take a test drive at your Ford Dealer's.



New Ford Maverick . . . the simple machine

1. LOW PRICE. Maverick is the best seller of the '70s at 1960 prices. And you get your money's worth. A complete car all ready to drive home.
2. LOW FUEL BILLS. In tests by professional drivers at our tracks, where we do our best to duplicate actual driving conditions, Maverick averaged 22.5 mpg. (Some Maverick owners report they get 25 mpg and better.)
3. 105 HORSES. Maverick's high-spirited Six gives you nearly twice as much horsepower as the leading import's engine. You get fast acceleration, easy passing.
4. PEOPLE-SIZED INTERIOR. Maverick pinches pennies, not people. Its front seat gives you nine inches more shoulder room than the leading import. Plus lots of leg room, hip room and head room.
5. EASY HANDLING. Maverick can outmaneuver the leading economy import. It can U-turn in a tighter circle, nip around corners and slide into tight parking spaces with amazing agility.
6. FEWER SERVICE CALLS. Maverick is actually easier and less expensive to maintain than an economy import. Maverick oil changes come only once every 6,000 miles and chassis lubrications once in 36,000 miles. The leading import recommends an oil change twice as often and a chassis lubrication six times as often. (Maverick gives you economy without inconvenience!)
7. SIMPLE SERVICE AND REPAIRS. The Maverick Owner's Manual has 24 pages of instructions for routine maintenance jobs you can do yourself, if you wish. You can change spark plugs, replace fuel filter, adjust ignition timing, and more. Even a smashed grille can be replaced in as little as 13 minutes.
8. WIDE-OPEN TRUNK SPACE. No more cramming in luggage just because you have a small car. Maverick gives you 10.4 cubic feet of luggage space—nearly twice as much as the leading import. (With Maverick, you can take it with you.)
9. SOLID DURABILITY. Maverick's unitized body construction makes it light, strong and durable. (And Maverick's 3-speed transmission is tough enough to handle twice as much horsepower as the engine turns out.) (Maverick may be little, but you don't have to treat it like a kid.)
10. BUILT-IN SAFETY. Unlike most economy imports, Maverick's tread is wider than the car is high. That means stability—mighty important when the road is wet or the wind is strong.
